

THE LAST VOYAGE OF THE DOMINA ISABEL

The dip of the chains missed us by the barest inch; then we swung clear, tossed high on the creamy crest of a huge roller, which enabled us to look straight down on the sloping deck.

"Is everyone here?" I asked.

"All but Jim Cole, sir."

"Cole, where is he?"

"He is down below."

"Well, all I know about it is, I hauled him out of the tangle and shook him wide awake. Then I left him to go and report to Kelly. That's the last I saw of him, sir, but it's a sore thing he ain't here."

De Nova had hold of the tiller, and I sprang forward, pushing past Sanchez, who was in the bow.

"Lay her nose close in where I can jump for the chains," I ordered sharply. "We can't leave Cole behind to drown."

It was a bit of the ticklish job the way the sea was running, and that jumping, I wrecked sagging under, but the mate knew his trade, and as the boat rose high on the swell, I leaped and hung on, my feet dangling in the froth. As the sudden hull swung reeling over I clambered up and dropped to the deck. The missing negro was nowhere in sight. I leaned over, staring down at the bobbing boat being hurled back by the rebound of the surge, yet seeing only the white face of Doris, turned appealingly toward me.

"Pull out, boys; strong now! Give her plenty of room, so she won't suck you down when she drops. I've got to try the cabin."

I got that far. I even got fairly within the door, and my ears caught the dull, muffled sounds of blows between the decks. My God! the fellow had actually gone back into that icy hold to dig for coal. As I stood there, trembling, wondering if I could dare the passage, I felt a sudden quiver of the deck, heard a sharp, ripping sound forward, a yell of mingled voices, and turned and ran for the rail. With all my strength I flung myself forth—straight out into the gray sea. I went down, down, down, feeling as if the very life was being sucked out of me, every muscle paralyzed by the coldness of the water. As I came up, gasping, struggling, scarce able to move, I found myself in the arms of a man, every instant in agony; and then, all at once, I found the crest and breathed the welcome air, my stiffened limbs moving mechanically, my brain throbbing with pain. I could see nothing until a huge roller flung me upward, buffeting my face with icy spray, and there, below in the hollow, tossed the long-boat, every pallid face staring up at me. I saw them frantically back water as the great surge hurled me down headlong. I was beside them; they clutched at me and missed. The stern, swung suddenly about by the blow of the sea, loomed over me, and then my fingers gripped a dripping out-blade. God knows

WAS A GREAT SUFFERER FOR FIVE YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent troubles of civilized life, and thousands of people suffer untold agony after every meal, for nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I thought I would write and tell you of the good Burdock Blood Bitters has done me and also tell you how thankful I am."

"For five years I had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and tried different doctors and proprietary medicines, but could get no relief. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have much faith in it, but I thought I would give it a trial. To-day I am completely cured, and I will always recommend it."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about thirty-five years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

with fire. I see the faces of the men becoming more haggard and hopeless as they stared, dull-eyed and aimlessly, out over the endless waste of water to the dim sky. We were so tired of it; it had grown so hateful in its pitiless vacancy, its dull dreary void. The very waves mocked us, the foam-flaked crests chasing each other in maddening sameness, the flying clouds the form of grotesque phantoms, leering and dancing like incarnate fiends. It seemed to me that with every recurring wave those within the boat appeared older, grayer, more deeply lined; their exposed flesh looked mottled with salt spray; their limbs cramped from confinement and cold; their eyes lustreless and heavy with despair. They conversed with some effort at cheerfulness at first, figuring on the speed with which we sailed, dividing up the treasure, counting the gold pieces, and speculating upon their probable value. But depression followed swiftly as day merged into day, with only that same desert of tumbling waters stretching about us, that same wild sky overhead. Finally the growing voices ceased altogether, the fellows becoming moody and sullen, scarcely answering even when addressed.

"Did—did you see Cole?" she questioned at last, more calmly.

"No, but I heard him; he was down in the lazarette, chopping at the ice, poor fellow."

I could only press her hand under the warmth of the blankets, still feeling it difficult to breathe.

"Did—did you see Cole?" she questioned at last, more calmly.

"No, but I heard him; he was down in the lazarette, chopping at the ice, poor fellow."

I felt her shiver; then she lifted her head, looking forth over the sea.

"To the very end the dead are doomed to guard their gold," she said solemnly, with a little of foreboding.

"Lift me up a little, dear, until I can look about."

She did so with much gentleness, and I leaned against the gunwale. It was a raw, cloudy morning, sea and sky the same dull, dreary expanse of gray, with nothing anywhere to relieve the awful loneliness of water on which we tossed. Our eyes met and our handclasp tightened.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

In Which We Fight Death.

I remember distinctly enough the first six days of that boat voyage; it seems as if every detail was burned upon my brain

LADIES DEBATED NEW CONSTITUTION

Orders of Daughters of Empire Had a Very Busy Session.

FEES OF LIFE MEMBERS

Charge Will Be $50 for the National Chapter, and $25 for Primary Chapters.

Toronto, May 31.—Predictions that stormy passages would mark the annual meeting of the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, were not fulfilled at yesterday's session of four score regents and delegates from chapters in all parts of Canada, in Foresters' Hall, College street. The delegates met in the morning, and after some preliminary remarks by Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, the president of the National Chapter, took up the proposed new constitution of the order. The consideration of this momentous document, in which Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K. C., as legal adviser of the order, participated, was continued until 6 p.m., by which time a considerable portion of it had been adopted or amended to meet the views of the delegates.

At the commencement of the discussion of the constitution it was suggested by a delegate that the order should apply for a federal charter instead of operating under a provincial charter system. Then a debate took place upon the clause providing for the granting of life memberships in the order. On the suggestion of Mrs. Colin Campbell, of Winnipeg, it was decided to include the fee for such membership in the National Chapter from $100 to $50.

Mrs. Johnston, of Victoria, B. C., thereupon proposed that primary chapters be authorized to appoint persons to be made life members of their own local organizations, but not of the superior chapters, such as those of the province or Dominion. After some debate the motion was adopted and the fee for local life membership was fixed at $25.

Mrs. Crear, of Hamilton, had a number of amendments to propose to the clauses providing for the establishment of provincial chapters. The order, she said, had grown, but had grown lopsided, and steps should be taken to make it grow as it should. An order stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific could not be controlled by one small chapter, the provinces must control their own affairs. Mrs. Crear thereupon proposed that the provincial chapters should consist of the regents and vice-regents of primary chapters, while the provincial officers and a council of ten from the number at a meeting to be held annually in the capital cities of the respective provinces.

Mrs. Campbell, of Winnipeg, thought the provincial chapters would lose much in strength if they included only the regents and vice-regents of the primary chapters, and she suggested that in framing the constitution he had sought to make the provincial chapters representative of the whole membership in their districts. It was finally decided that the provincial chapters should consist of all the officers of primary chapters, that lists of persons nominated for offices in the provincial chapters should be voted upon by all the members of those lesser bodies, and not merely by the persons present at the meeting of the provincial chapter. The suggestion that half of the councillors should be required to reside within a certain radius of the capital city was expected to cause a warm discussion. The question was disposed of, however, by the adoption of a provision that provincial chapters should have councils of twenty members, and that each provincial chapter might elect as its secretary a resident of the province, provided the residence qualifications of its councillors.

Unauthorized Circulars.

Before the business of the day was commenced, Mrs. A. E. Gooderham briefly addressed the delegates. Before the consideration of the proposed amendments to the constitution was begun, she wished to call attention to the fact that since October last at least five unofficial documents had been sent out without the knowledge of the National Council. She declared that the present executive had not during its seven months departed from the policy followed by the order for the last five years.

Mrs. Gooderham said that the Victoria League in Britain had advocated the establishment of a home in Canada for young girls arriving from the old country. With the idea the Duchess of Connaught had expressed her sympathy, and Mrs. Gooderham believed that if such institution were opened it might appropriately be called the Duchess of Connaught home. Her royal highness telegraphed her regret for her absence from the meeting, and Mrs. Langstaffe, president of the National Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire in the United States, sent greetings, and expressed the hope that members of the order in all parts of the world would sing "God Save the King" at noon each day.

Today the meeting will continue the discussion of the constitution, will receive reports of officers, and will elect new officers. Papers on "Recommendations to Methods of Work and Tuberculosis," by Mrs. Henshaw, of Vancouver, and "Work and Methods for the Alleviation of Tuberculosis," by Mrs. A. Hodgetts, medical officer of the Conservation Commission, will be read.
