dog owned by Mrs. Estelle Taylor

Dempsey, wife of Jack Dempsey, which arrived here yesterday from England on the steamer Samaria, was detained by customs officials today, pending determination of the dog's value.

Mrs. Dempsey valued the dog at $58. But dog fanciers who examined the canine at customs headquarters said it was of a nearly extinct breed, a rarity, and was worth $10,000. The butcher of the liner, who acted as butler to the dog on its trans-Atlantic voyage, placed its value at an even higher sum.

The editorial makes reference to
