Sending McCallum in to relieve Delman in the ninth yesterday with the bases filled and nobody gone, and the score knotted at a 5-5 count, did not prove to be good strategy, as Kane's second triple of the day, with three men on, came off the little Scotsman's first ball, and four more hits and four more tallies resulted, giving Saginaw the first game of the series, 12 to 7. The switch in pitchers looked good strategy, as Delman had been nicked for pairs of hits in the fifth and sixth, but it turned out just the other way, as it often does in baseball.

Kane's two triples with the bases full each time and Jeane's homer in the sixth were bright spots in a snappy game.

The series will be halted this afternoon because of President Harding's funeral, and today's game will be shoved on until tomorrow as a double-header.

The fighting spirit of the Tecs was shown time and again yesterday, and the Aces should be minus their league leadership by Saturday night.

Down the Line In All Sports

The first ground has been broken for London's new arena, and London this winter will once again be able to hold up its head. There'll be no waiting for the weatherman to start the hockey season, and teams throughout the district will be able to get their early-season workouts in as well as the local teams. Indoor training for a hockey season is something requiring too heavy a strain on the imagination for most athletes, and the result usually showed as far as local teams were concerned. The new arena should be a boon to Stratford this year. While there is still good motoring, the Indians will be able to get ice and be in great shape by the time the Western Ontario senior group opens.

The real reason why the local committee decided to protect the Ontario championships against lack of competition, and therefore accepted American entries, may be blamed to Toronto in a large measure. When the meeting which decided to throw open the meet convened, no Toronto entries had been received.

If there weren't little run-ins in the major league like the Luque-Stengel mix, the spirit of red-blooded competition would be lost in the roar of the business machinery which surrounds to a greater or less degree all professional sport.

The Hams may not be getting pitching, but Johnny Noonan is.

The cry for more pitchers is a wailing one. The majors are spending bundles of money looking over all sorts of it, and the class A.A. organizations swell the chorus. Considering the contradictions of baseball, a blindfold stab here and there in the minors should produce something for any big league club. Petie Behan, up in the majors and doing not so badly; Jack Bentley, a supposed known quantity with the world's champion at his back, having tough sledding, and big Herman Schwartje slipping into the International with his small but well-controlled assortment, are a few of the inconsistencies which make picking pitchers look like a blindfold

In reply to Tommy Gibbons' allegation that he didn't get any the best of it, Referee Jimmy Dougherty, who was third man in the ring at Shelby, heatedly asserts that Tommy coated his body with invisible grease, and that he could not handle Gibbons in the clinches at all, he was so slippery. One of the New York experts suggests that this must have been the reason Dempsey's blows skidded so often. A few more disclosures of this kind and the composure of the expert, which was badly upset at Shelby, may gradually come back.

The Hamilton Spectator says that Bobby Ebor is going to meet McCarthy of Galt here this week. This was a surprise, and the Spectator goes on with a few more surprises. It says that professional boxing is not popular in London because they've never had any chance to see any real bouts. It says further that if Ebor could be put against a good man here it would not take long to educate the natives to what good sport professional London had professional boxing while the first two settlers in Hamilton were still arguing whether they lived beside a hill or a mountain.

Londoners don't need educating so much as they do a refresher course
