

GEORGINA'S REASONS.

A NEW AND FASCINATING CONTINUED STORY.

BY HENRY JAMES.

name old reason, the fruit of other hours and places, the stillness to which Georgina listened, while he felt her eager eyes fairly set into his face, so that his cheeks burned with the touch of them. The moments stood before him in their turn; each one was distinct. "Ah, well," said Mr. Roy, "perhaps I interrupt—I'll just dash off my note." Benyon knew that he was rather bewildered, that he was making a protest, that he was leaving the room; knew presently that Georgina again stood before him alone.

"You are exactly the man I thought you," she announced, as joyously as if she had won a bet.

"You are the most horrible woman I can imagine. Good God! If I had to live with you!" That is what he said to her in answer.

Even at this she never flushed; she continued to smile in triumph. "He adores me—but what's that to you. Of course you have all the future," she said; "but I know you as if I had made you."

Benyon reflected a moment. "If he adores you, you are all right. If our divorce is pronounced, you will be free, and then he can marry you properly, which he would like ever so much better."

"It's too touching to hear you reason about it. Fancy me telling such a hideous story—about myself—me—me!" And she touched her breasts with her white fingers.

Benyon gave her a look that was charged with all the sickness of his helpless rage. "You—you!" he repeated, as he turned away from her and passed through the door which Mr. Roy had left open.

She followed him into the hall, she was close behind him; he moved before her as she pressed forward with her reason, "said," "I wouldn't be for him. It was my hideous pride. That is what prevents me now."

"I don't care what it is," Benyon answered wearily, with his hand on the knob of the door.

She laid hers on his shoulder; he stood there an instant feeling it, wishing that her loose hands touched him the right to strike her to the earth—to strike her so that she should never rise again.

"How clever you are, and intelligent!" always—as you used to be; to feel so perfectly and know so well—without more scenes—that it's hopeless—my ever contenting!—If I have—with you—the shame of having made you promise, let me at least have the profit."

His back had been turned to her, but at this she glanced round.

"To hear you talk of shame—!"

"You don't know what I have gone through; but, of course, I don't ask any pity from you. Only I should like to say something kind to you before we part. I admire you. Who will ever tell her, if you don't? How will she ever know, then? She will be as safe as I am. You know what that is," said Georgina, smiling.

He had opened the door while she spoke, apparently not heeding her, thinking only of getting away from her forever. In reality he heard every word she said, and felt to his marrow the lowered suggestive tone in which she made him that last recommendation. Outside on the steps—she stood there in the doorway, her hand on his last look. "I only hope you will die. I shall pray for that." And he descended into the street and took his way.

It was after this that his temptation came. Not the temptation to return betrayal for betrayal; that passed away even in a few days, for he simply knew that he couldn't break his promise, that it imposed itself on him as abhorably as the color of his eyes, or the stammer of his life; it had gone forth into the world to be reached or his name was far beyond his reach or his authority. But the temptation to go through the form of a marriage with Kate Theory, to let her supplant him as he was as free as himself, and that their children, if they should have any, would, before the law, have a right to exist—this attractive idea held him fast for many weeks, and caused him to pass some haggard nights and days. It was perfectly possible she might learn his secret, and that, as no one could suspect it or have an interest in bringing it to light, they both might live and die in security and honor. This vision fascinated him; it was, I say, a real temptation. Not thought of other solutions—of telling her that he was married (without telling her to whom) and inducing her to overlook such a scandal, and content himself with a concord, and that the world would see no flaw. But after all the contentions of his spirit it remained as clear to him as before that dishonor was in everything but renunciation. So, at last, he renounced. He took two steps which attested this act to himself. He addressed an urgent request to the Secretary of the Navy that he might, with as little delay as possible, be despatched on another long voyage; and he returned to Boston to tell Kate Theory that they must wait. He could explain so little that, say what he would, he was aware that he could not make his comings seem natural, and he saw that his other trusted him—that she never understood. She trusted without understanding, and she agreed to wait. When the writer of these pages last heard of the pair they were waiting still.

THE END.

The Great Whispering Gallery.

In speaking of the most wonderful canon known on earth, the Arizona Chronicle says that the transmission of sounds along the Grand Canon of the Colorado has for years been a matter of surprise to the prospectors and miners who frequent it, and that the isolated sections. Since the advent of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad to the Colorado River there is a basis for some idea of how far sounds are transmitted between the walls of the chasm. A train of cars crossing the bridge at the Needles Cottonwood Island, a distance of eighty-four miles. The life and drum of Fort Mojave are plainly heard at Bull's Head, a distance of eighty-four miles. The report of the cannon gun at Fort Mojave can be heard at El Dorado Canon, a distance of ninety-six miles.

FIGURATIVELY SPEAKING.

BY ADAM WELDON.

"When I was young and went to school, I stayed long since gone by. They told me 'twas a school day. That figure never lies."

But this idea I have outgrown, And with good reason why. For nowadays it is well known, That figures often lie.

The lady who your love has won, Whose hand to win you try, Is really but a skeleton— Her figure tells a lie.

She's very showy, but seems quite tall, Her feet are large, and yet she looks small— Her figure boasts a lie.

She seems to be a baron maid, As plump as pumpkin pie; But is not what she seems to be, Her figure tells a lie.

'Tis done with bustle, coarsely, staid, And leading light; 't is by, By these and many other ways Her figure tells a lie.

So, recollect what I have said, And have a thankful sigh, That you have not as yet been sold By figures that do lie.

Old-Fashioned Mothers.

Thank God, some of us have old-fashioned mothers. Not a woman of the period, enameled and painted, with her great chignon, her curls and bustle, whose white, jeweled hands never felt the clasp of baby fingers; but a dear, old-fashioned, sweet-voiced mother, with eyes in whose clear depths the low-light shine, and brown hair, just threaded with silver, lying smooth upon the faded cheek. Those dear hands, worn with toil, gently guiding our tottering steps in childhood, and smoothing our pillow in sickness, or reaching out to us in yearning tenderness.

Blessed is the memory of an old-fashioned mother. It floats to us now, like the beautiful perfume from some woodstock blossom. The music of their voices may be lost, but the entrancing memory of hers will echo in our souls forever. Other faces may fade away and be forgotten, but hers will shine on.

When in the fatal pauses of business life our feet wander back to the old homestead, and crossing the well-worn threshold, stand once more in the room she hallowed by her presence, how the feeling of childhood, innocence and dependence comes over us, and we know down in the mellow sunshine, streaming through the open window—just where long ago we knelt by our mother's knee, listening to "Our Father." How many times when the tempter lured us on, has the memory of those sacred hours, that mother's words, her faith and prayers, saved us from plunging into the deep abyss of sin. Years have filled great drifts between her and us, but they have not hidden from our sight the glory of her pure, unselfish love.

Women as Physicians.

A little article in a Philadelphia paper shows that women are being educated as physicians in that country, that they may bring relief to thousands of Chinese women, who will under no circumstances submit themselves to the ministrations of a male physician. The writer of the New York Graphic, from the oldest and most peculiar civilization. The average Chinese woman is not a person of remarkable ability. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidney, which the blood is more effectively purified, remove through the natural channels certain acid elements in the circulation which produce rheumatism and other ailments. The medicine is also a fine laxative and antacid medicine and general corrective.

—Most extraordinary are the twinges which reach the muscles and joints of rheumatism. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidney, which the blood is more effectively purified, remove through the natural channels certain acid elements in the circulation which produce rheumatism and other ailments. The medicine is also a fine laxative and antacid medicine and general corrective.

—A field of course.—Thomas Sabu of Eglington, says: "I have used Hollister's Corn Cure, and it has done for me what no other medicine has done. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extirpator, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corn."

—M. Sheehan of Onondaga, Mich., writes: "I have used Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on horses for different diseases and found it to be just as you recommend. It has done me justice to every time, and it is the best Oil for horses I have ever used." Observe the name "Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil" is on the front of the wrapper, as there are imitations on it.

Does This Refer to You?
—Are you troubled with biliousness, dyspepsia, liver or kidney complaints, or bad blood? If you will send a certain cure in Burdock Blood Bitters.

—West Toronto Junction is within a few minutes of the United States and the Grand Trunk or the Northern. Real estate in the neighborhood has steadily risen in value and promises to advance still more rapidly. Some of the best lots in West Toronto are to be had from George Clarke, 285 Yonge street.

—Mrs. A. Nelson, Cranford, writes: "I was a sufferer from Chronic Dyspepsia eleven years. Always after eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, caused a drooping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Poppelwell, chemist of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languid feeling has all gone, and my family have enjoyed it with the best result."
