To Make a Happy Home.—Learn to govern yourself, and to be gentle and govern yourself, and to be gentle and solten them by prayer and a sense of your own shortcomings and errors. Remember that valuable as is the gift of speech, silence is often more valuable. Do not expect too much from others, but remember that all have an evil nature, whose development we must expect; and that we shoud forbear and forgive, as we often desire forbearance and forgiveness ourselves. Never retort a sharp or angry word; it is the second word that makes the quarrel. Beware of the first disagreement. Learn to say kind and gentle things whenever opportunity offers. who does things which I would not tolerate in my girl friends." This is the only true standard. It is very simple and exceedingly practical. The wayfaring young woman, though a fool, need not err there in. She cited a silly young wife who, on being asked how she endured her husband's absence, playfully said, "Oh, I have a parrot that swears, and a monkey that chews tobacco, so I manage to make life go." This is surely a severe sarcasm on the young man of the period, and certainly one that does not apply to the average which is used to stuff tuckies wid when the young man of the period, and certainly one that does not apply to the average youth, as we temperance people are acquainted with him.
