A PLEA FOR HOME AUTHORITY.

The records of the Juvenile Court and the cases of daily occurrence in which children are concerned make one wonder if there is such a thing as home restraint any more. Have parents ceased entirely to exercise authority? It sometimes looks as if the boys' and the girls' will and wish were a law unto themselves and the only guide or ruling principle they recognized. It has been said that "this is the era of the child." In some respects it is a great deal too much the era of the child. There are two aspects of the new outlook towards children. No one will deny that a great advance has been made in the way children charged with wrongdoing are treated now. The time when children who had in any way broken a law were subject to the same forms of arrest, trial and punishment as befit adult offenders already seems to have belonged to the dark ages, although it is not more than fifteen years since the juvenile court system first came into practice in America, and only about four years in our own country. A child who breaks the law is treated not as a criminal, but as a delinquent, in need of "counsel, protection, aid, and assistance," therefore the aim of the Children's Court is to bring such influence to bear upon every child appearing before it as to form a better character and direct into a better way of life. Up to a few years ago, a boy or girl who offended against the law and was arrested, was placed along with criminals until the time came for trial, when he might be sent to jail to finish his education. A totally different procedure is followed today. The fact of the theft or other misdemeanor is not the only thing taken into account but the child's case is studied in all its relationships. His family life, home training, special temptations, even his health, and mentality are investigated, and then he is given another chance under the supervision of the probation officer who so far as may be is to him or to her a "guide, philosopher and friend."

But what of the father and mother who should be the natural guide, philosopher and friend—and governor? One reads of a parent bringing a child to the juvenile court, and explaining that "nothing can be done with him at home." In homes where there is a desperate struggle to make a living, it is all, perhaps one of the other parent missing, or worse, it can be understood that there is not much time or energy for training the children properly. But, as the chief of police said the other day, lots of fine children are to be found among the poorer families. Parents, however poor, can, and many of them do, bring up their children to be law-abiding and respectable, and perhaps the need for mutual help and self-sacrifice makes for the development of character. Provided there is the right home influence. There are cases where the forces of heredity and the association with companions of the wrong sort, the excitements of a big city's streets and the desire for pleasure, prove too strong for a mother or father's teaching to cope with. But as a general rule, the child trained in the right way at home does not fall into evil courses outside. Talking with the writer on this subject the other day a gentleman made the remark that a good many parents nowadays seem to think that if they feed and clothe their children and start them off to

"MY ONLY MEDICINE"

Says Mrs. Corbett, Are "Fruit-a-lives" "They Keep Me In Perfect Health"

Mrs. ANNIE A. CORBETT
 AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913.
 "I have used 'Fruit-a-lives' for indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with 'Fruit-a-lives' and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night. Before taking 'Fruit-a-lives' I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments. 'Fruit-a-lives' advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done a world of good for me. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot!"

Joker's Corner

"Is the minister through preachin' yet?" was once asked of a cannie auld Scotch lady. "O, aye," was the response, "he's through lang syne—but he's talkin' yet."

"Oh, Willie, Willie!" cried a teacher to a hopelessly dull pupil. "Whatever do you think your head is for?"

Willie, who evidently thought this another of the troublesome questions that teachers are always asking, pondered it deeply. "Please, miss," he replied at length, "to keep my collar on!"

Mark Twain once asked a neighbor if he might borrow a set of his books. The neighbor replied ungraciously that he was welcome to read them in his library, but he had a rule never to let his books leave his house. Some weeks later the same neighbor sent over to ask for the loan of Mark Twain's lawnmower.

"Certainly," said Mark, "but since I can't let it rule never to let it leave my lawn, you'll be obliged to use it there."

A little girl had sent back her plate for turkey two or three times, and had been helped bountifully to all the other good things that go to make a grand dinner. Finally she was observed looking rather disconsolately at her unfinished dish of plum pudding. "What's the matter, Ethel?" asked Uncle John; "you look mournful." "That's the trouble," said Ethel; "I am more'n full." Then she wondered why everybody laughed.

Ten-year-old William came home one day in a regrettable state of disorder and a somewhat bruised face.

"O, Willie, Willie!" exclaimed his mother, shocked and grieved. "You have disobeyed me again! How often have I told you not to play with that naughty Johnson boy?"

"Mamma," said William, in utter disgust at this feminine reprimand, "do I look as if I had been playing with anybody?"

Seated comfortably in a railway carriage a commercial traveller found beside him a rather seditious looking gentleman with whom he sought to converse, and began by explaining what goods he sold, and in what large quantities he sold them. "And you, my friend," he added, "what is your line?" "Brains," answered his companion gruffly.

"Ah, brains, you say? That must be nice. You carry no samples, I see."

In a registration booth in San Francisco an old colored woman had just finished registering for the first time.

Senator and Mrs. Cummins of Iowa went one evening to dine in a Washington restaurant where colored waiters were employed. Mrs. Cummins, after she had taken up the menu, found that she had left her glasses at home and therefore was unable to read. She handed the waiter the card and asked him to order the dinner, but he found that he also had forgotten his glasses.

Then he handed the card to the waiter with the request: "Will you please read the menu to me?" The waiter bowed in a courtly manner and answered, in a low tone: "Deed, suh, I'd like to 'blige you, but I ain't got no educashun, neither"

TO MUSE UPON.

Women who shine in society seldom shine in the kitchen. The beauty doctor demands spot cash for removing freckles.

It's surprising how many friends you have when you don't need them. It's hard to love your neighbor as yourself if he keeps chickens while you are trying to raise a garden. We don't blame a hog for being a hog, but we blame a man for being one.

The woman who quarrels with her complexion is always ready to make up. When you have saved up enough money to invest in doubtful mining stocks—buy an overcoat. The way of the transgressor may be hard, and there are other ways that are not easy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. Today they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

PECULIAR WAY OF COOLING WATER

In central Nicaragua the native women cool water in one of the most peculiar ways imaginable. They take an eastern jar, fill it perhaps three-quarters full of water and when anybody wishes a cool drink, they grasp the jar by two leather handles and swing it through the air, as if it were an enormous dumb-bell. The centrifugal force of action prevents the water from flying out, and yet it is all the time moving rapidly within the jar. In a few moments the water is comparatively cool and is relished by the thirsty passer-by.—Walter K Putney, in "Onward."

"It is a pleasure to tell you that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best cough medicine I have ever used," writes Mrs. Hugh Campbell, of Lovonia, Ga. "I have used it with all my children and the results have been highly satisfactory." For sale by all dealers.

PAIN IN MY BACK IS ALL GONE

Since I Got a Box of Gin Pills

CHURCH ST., CORNWALLIS, N.S. January 23rd, 1913.

"About a year ago, I was suffering so much with a dreadful Lambe Back and Hips, that I could not stand upright. I was informed by a friend about GIN PILLS. I got a box. It helped me immediately. I have taken about twelve boxes and the pains in my back and hips are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of the wonderful effects of your GIN PILLS."

B. C. DAVID.
 Lumbago and plasters won't cure Lambe Back—because they never reach the part that is causing the pain. The whole trouble is with the Kidneys and you must cure the Kidneys in order to stop the pain. GIN PILLS cure weak, sick, strained Kidneys as nothing else will. GIN PILLS drive away the pain every time—or your money promptly refunded. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. A BOY'S IMPRESSION OF LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

I, a lad going on fourteen years of age, called at the Executive Mansion in Washington and handed to the doorkeeper a card which I had caused to be written especially for use on what was for me a very great occasion by the expert "calligraphist," as he called himself, of Willard's Hotel. Beneath my name, which the card-writer had inscribed with elaborate if not altogether appropriate flourishes, I had appended in my own schoolboy hand-writing, "Nephew of Dr. Cornelius Rea Agnew." My uncle was well known to Mr. Lincoln and his use of his name doubtless facilitated my admission to the office of the private secretary to the President, where I found the chief magistrate of my country at a desk in conversation with a gentleman, the only other occupant of the room, who was, as I afterward learned, the minister of France. When I entered the office the President was seated in a curiously constructed armchair made after a design suggested by himself. The left arm of this unique piece of furniture began low and, rising in a spiral to form the back, terminated on the right side of the seat at the height of the shoulders of the person seated thereon. Mr. Lincoln had placed himself crosswise in this chair with his long legs hanging over its lower arm, his back supported by the higher side. When the attendant who had presented my card to the President, and had then ushered me into the secretary's office, closed the door behind me and I found myself actually in the presence of Abraham Lincoln, I had the grace to feel embarrassed, for I then realized that I, a mere schoolboy, was intruding upon the patience and good-nature of a very busy overworked man, the great and honored President of a country in the agony of a civil war. Noting my hesitation, Mr. Lincoln very gently said: "Come in, my son." Then he arose, disengaged himself as it were, from the chair, advanced to meet me, and it seemed to me that I had never beheld so tall a man, so dignified and impressive a personage, and certainly I had never felt so small, so insignificant, "so unpardonably young."—From "A Schoolboy's Interview with Abraham Lincoln," by William Agnew Paton, in the December (Christmas) Scribner.

CANADA GETS $140,165 FROM NEW COMPANIES.

(Montreal Daily Telegraph)
 Ottawa, Nov. 18.—That the Dominion reaps a goodly revenue from the companies which seek Dominion incorporation is evidenced from the figures for the first seven months of the year ending October 31. Up to that date no less than $140,165.60 was paid into the Dominion treasury in the shape of fees for the issuance of Dominion letters patent, and supplementary Dominion letters patent.
 The fees are fixed according to the capitalization of the company, $50 being charged for the first $1,000 capitalization, and a sliding scale as the capitalization increases being the system, the amount per thousand, however, decreasing as the big figures are reached.
 As compared with the revenue for the corresponding period last year, there is an apparent falling off this year. In 1912 the revenue for the first nine months was $175,187.90, an increase of $35,000 over this year.
 This, however, was accounted for by a fee of $24,000 in June for the Brazilian Traction and Power Co., and by another large fee of $13,000 in April of 1912. These were exceptional in size of capitalization.

HICKS ON THE 1914 FORECAST.

In replying to a question about the outlook for the summer of 1914 astronomer Hicks has made the following forecast: "We believe that the agricultural outlook for next year and for several years to come, so far as seasonal rains are concerned is decidedly more hopeful than during the summer of 1913. We believe that farmers, stockmen and business men generally, can safely count on prosperous crop years for the next two or three to come. 'Fringes' of remaining drouth will linger here and there, but upon the whole, look for bountiful yields."
