

Cross never forgot that—but perhaps it was, lest they should, and still more, lest we should, ever forget the supreme glory due to the Divine Spirit, God's direct hand was sometimes wonderfully seen. The work at Ono was a remarkable instance of this. Ono is the chief island of a group situated one hundred and fifty miles south of Lakemba and the most southerly extremity of Fiji.

THAKOMBAW, LATE KING OF FIJI.

Without any prompting except that which must have come from God's good spirit, these people began to grope from their own deep heathen darkness towards the light:

“An infant crying in the night,
An infant crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry.”

In 1835, about the same time that the mission to Fiji was com-
