

from 1,187 to 1,606 within three years. With an attendance like that at the School we should have to carry on work in captive balloons.

Messrs. Pic, Don and Ernie, of the Third-Year Civils, broke a record in the Physical Laboratory the other day, determining the latent heat of steam in fifteen minutes. The method used was the theory of improbabilities.

A new and thrilling romance is soon to be given to the public entitled "The Mystery of the Mineralogical Lab., or Who Swiped the Dollar-and-a-Half Diamond." In it will be disclosed the final whereabouts of that precious gem.

The Engineers' dance proved a financial as well as a social success, and the surplus is not to be wasted. A committee composed of Corporals Madden and Allan has been appointed to arrange for a Beer Supper. This is an innovation.

Mr. E. A. Greene, who is well known about the School, has returned to the old place to take up the work of the Mechanical and Electrical course. "Ernie" has been in the Engineering Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, his work lying chiefly between Philadelphia and Washington.

It is reported that Messrs. "Sandy" McKenzie and "Casey" Baldwin, '05, paid a casual visit to the drafting-room one day last week, merely to satisfy a little passing curiosity on their part. There is no limit, in those latter days, beyond which this little weakness will not lead a man.

"A considerable quantity of this commodity is manufactured in London," remarked the lecturer, whereupon applause of a very audible character came from the vicinity of a very promising youth who hails from a village of that name up west. "Yes," continued the lecturer, "the old land produces a great deal." Utter collapse of Williams.

Messrs. Crearer, Coates and Manson were elected last Thursday to the permanent committee for the '04 Year Book. A motion was brought forward to forego the Year Book and contribute the amount that would be spent on it to the Convocation Hall Fund, but as steps had already been taken with regard to the Year Book, it was impossible to take action in that way.

A circular has been posted at the School, stating that Mr. Andrew Carnegis has founded scholarships for Research in the
