One hot day, at noon, Jane put on her hood to go to a cool wood for nuts. She gave her dog and kid some food, and told them to be good till she came back. She soon ran off to the wood, and got a fine lot of nuts. She had her hood full of them, and was on her way home, when a mad bull ran at her. She fell in the mud, and lost all her nuts and her hood; but the bull did not get to her. She had not room to move; but when the bull was gone, a poor boy was so good as to pull her out of the mud. He got her a hat and some nuts, and she went home. The dog and the kid had been good all the time.
