

The Second Volume of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's
History of the War.

---

THE BRITISH CAMPAIGN IN FRANCE & FLANDERS 1915

With Maps, Plans, and Diagrams.

7s. 6d. net.

"If any student of the war is in search of a plain statement, accurate and chronological, of what took place in these dynamic sequences of onslaughts which have strewn the plain of Ypres with unnumbered dead, and which won for the Canadians, the Indians, and our own Territorial Divisions immortal fame, let him go to this volume. He will find in it few dramatic episodes, no unbridled panegyric, no purple patches. But he will own himself a much enlightened man, and, with greater knowledge, will be filled with much greater pride and much surer confidence."
—Daily Telegraph.

"The success of the first volume of the history leaves the reception of this continuation beyond doubt. Nor are the causes of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's popularity as a military historian far to seek. He is readable, lucid, correct, and terse. He knows his subject, and he never loses his sense of perspective. . . . Both because he combines imagination with caution, and has had free access in compiling his book to official records, every statement he makes can be relied upon."—Westminster Gazette.

"Sir Arthur has limited himself to a painstaking record of operations in the field. His second volume comes up to the standard set by the first, and cannot be neglected by any student of the war."—Professor A. F. POLLARD in the Daily Chronicle.

---

HODDER AND STOUGHTON, PUBLISHERS, LONDON, E.C.4.