"Of course there will be a great many obstacles to overcome," said Mr. Ross, "but we have no fear that we will not be able to complete the road satisfactorily. The starting point of the road may be Telegraph Creek or Glenora, but neither point has been decided upon as yet. Mr. Thomas White, of St. Thomas, the chief engineer, is on the location, and it will be upon his report that the starting point will be decided. We expect to employ 3,000 or 4,000 men -we may have to employ 10,000-for. of course, many of them will leave the road for the gold fields.
