Keep Your Eye on the Ball, Etc.

An English writer tells us that many players, when about to drive, have so many "dots" to think about that they remind him of the distracted centipede. The centipede was happy quite until the toad in front. Said: "They which leg goes after which?" And worked her mind to such a pitch she lay distracted in the ditch. Considering how to run.

FRENCH JOURNALS REFUSE TO SUSPEND ONE DAY A WEEK

Writers and Other Workers Discouraged When Fight for Day Off Fails—Now Ask Legal Holiday.

London, July 27.—(By Mail)—The Syndicate of French Journalists, including all kinds of French newspaper workers, is disappointed that, in spite of much discussion of the subject, their efforts to obtain a paperless day once a week seem as far from success as ever, according to a Reuter dispatch to The Westminster.

The syndicate has now voiced its wishes in a resolution demanding that a law should be enacted in France compelling newspapers to cease publication for twenty-four clear hours every week. The reason given for the necessity for a weekly day of rest are numerous, the chief being that it is impossible to post copies to arrange for the stamps. It is pointed out that newspaper men do specialized work, and that news cannot be written the political notes, nor can the sporting editor write the leading articles. Moreover, in the provinces the staff is generally insufficient for it to be possible to arrange a weekly holiday even in this way.

Journalists writing for several newspapers would inevitably find that the days allotted them by their various papers did not coincide. Also, even where holidays in turn have been arranged, it has been found that editors and reporters are inevitably at the mercy of events, and have to forego their weekly rest should it fall on a day when the news situation required their presence on duty. Newspaper porters, printers and newspaper vendors have no weekly holiday under any circumstances. It is further pointed out that it can hardly be objected that a day without newspapers would limit French expression to the detriment of the country, as Italy, Spain and America, and, to a certain extent, Great Britain, have instituted a newspaperless day without experiencing any harmful results. Losses men paid by the line or the article would be met by a modification of the scale of pay for such work. Finally, it is urged that it is impossible to leave such a reform to private initiative, as those who introduced it would be liable to be subjected to severe losses.

WAR ON BEDBUGS AND COCKROACHES

Toronto Medical Health Officer Tells How to Combat Insect Army.

Toronto, July 27.—The long hot spell has been the cause for the increase in more modern language, the humble but wily bedbug, and while lacadaidical citizens have been sitting around trying to keep cool, these night riders, or ramblers, have laid siege to part of the city. Cockroaches have also been very prolific this summer. Dr. Hastings, M. B. O., always on the job when a menace arises, has drawn up a plan of attack and has sent out a call for volunteers to advance against the enemies that invade the homes of the people of the department has suggested the battle song of freedom in which appears the lines:

"There is a bug among those bugs, his name it is Big Ben. On his top jaw he has five teeth, and on his lower, ten." The doctor says the "hydro-cyanic gas attack would rout the 'roaches," but as this is highly poisonous to the attackers, he urges the safer method of burning sulphur, two pounds to each room, and to burn it in a tin can before him. Scouting danger he scampers to a safe position behind the ramparts in the streets of cupboards and bathrooms. One way to get him is to shoot sodium-fluoride powder into the stronghold with a dust gun.
