

GOOD RELATIONS, NOT RIVALRY, URGED BY ADMIRAL BENSON

America, He Declares, Must Utilize International Contact for World Peace by Trying to Conduct Business so as to Give Others a Fair Chance.

Washington, March 15.—The United States "must utilize international contact for world peace by trying to conduct its relations with business as to give the other fellow a fair chance," declared Admiral W. S. Benson, of the United States Shipping Board, speaking here yesterday along the lines of substituting commercial relations maintained on a just and fair basis which would permit all concerned to have a share of the world's business, for the old methods of the commercial rivalry, which were necessarily disastrous to one or more of the parties concerned and which, he said, were the real cause of modern wars.

The day is coming, Admiral Benson believed, when destructive commercial rivalry will be proved to be a thing of the past. Discussing the future of the American Merchant Marine, he said that its importance to the nation must be considered from its standpoint both as a secondary line of naval defense and as the chief agency through which the surplus goods of America could be sold. Low-water mark has been touched in the shipping business, in his opinion, and from this time forth the United States could be expected not only to hold its own but to do a little better than that. The Government is maintaining, at large expense, additional trade routes to meet the needs of private owners. American trade must look to South and Central America, the Far East and South Africa for expansion.

In this connection the fate of the ship subsidy bill is the subject of much discussion among those who are interested in the future of the American Merchant Marine. Senator Ladd of North Dakota said today that there are efforts to make government ownership appear a failure in order that subsidies must be granted to private owners. That is an indication of a kind of opposition that will have to be weathered in Congress. Meanwhile it is reported from London that English interests, anticipating the enactment of the legislation asked for by President Harding, are casting about for some method of offsetting the advantages that it is expected to give American shipping.

Sir Frederick Lewis, addressing the Chamber of Shipping, said that the entire future of British shipping was largely dependent upon the attitude of the United States and that if British shipping were subsidized the "British would have to reconsider their position."

The British claim that at a time when they are likely to suffer because of the formidable competition of an American subsidized Merchant Marine, they are unfairly taxed at home and a movement is afoot to get relief from the Government which will enable them to compete with the United States shipping under new conditions.

The opinion of Admiral Benson is that there is shipping enough for all, or will be, when international trade becomes brisker and on a larger scale than at present, and that all that the United States desires is its proportionate share of the carrying business of the world.

"MOST AMERICAN POPE" TO HOLD HIGH OFFICE

Archbishop Keane's View of New Pontiff—Simplicity and Affability Amazing.

Rome, March 15.—"He is the most American Pope we have ever had," was the comment of Archbishop J. J. Keane of Dubuque, who after an hour's private audience with Pius XI gave your correspondent a most human picture of the new pontiff. "I talked with him in French and after making a few mistakes, said: 'I believe Your Holiness speaks much better English than I do French.' The Pope laughed and said he used to live in England and could then speak the language well, but had not had an opportunity to practice it for four years, and added, 'I am afraid to try to talk English now because of the mistakes I will make. It is embarrassing, you know.'"

"The Pope smiled. 'I suppose it will come back to me now,' he added. 'I am especially glad to have plenty of opportunity to practice on English-speaking archbishops.'"

"When I thought it time to leave I told the Pope my travelling companion, Father R. J. Dougherty, was waiting outside anxious to receive a blessing and see him. 'Bring him in,' said the Pope genially. He clasped both of Father Dougherty's hands and blessed him, and when I said I would not take any more of his time, replied, 'Oh, don't go yet,' and continued chatting to us, giving Father Dougherty the right to pass the apostolic blessing on to his congregation and family. When I did go, the Pope descended from the dais and accompanied us to the door."

Bishop Keane was amazed not only by the Pope's simplicity and affability, but also by his thorough grasp of church affairs and world-wide knowledge of America. Although he had never met Archbishop Keane before, he knew he had previously done him wrong in talking about it, saying, "I am very much interested in mountain and mountains."

Religion in Holy Land.

The Archbishop, who has just returned to Rome, after studying conditions under the new regime in Palestine, declared that one of the difficult problems of the future will be the reconciliation of the various races and religions now grouped in the Holy Land. He said he was greatly improved by the conditions there for pilgrims and tourists. Where a few years ago one had to travel on a donkey one can now go by regular automobile service over splendid roads. The control of Bethlehem and Jericho by automobile and even to the top of Mount Carmel at a speed of 35 miles per hour. On the railroad an excellent Pullman service is maintained. The British and Zionists, however, are heartily disliked by the Arabs, who form the majority of the population, and by the native Jews. The Arab hostility is due to the Zionist programme of self-determination. In which the Near Eastern peoples are firm believers, and also to the fact that so many of them have been dispossessed of the land which their fathers held for centuries in order to make room for the new Zionists from Poland and Russia. The native Jews are opposed to the Zionists because the newcomers believe more fervently in the Soviet system than in the Jewish religion.

Regard Zionism Sure to Fail.

"The situation now is quiet, but it is believed in Palestine that the Zionist government will prove a failure and the natives will make short work of the Zionists if the British withdraw their troops. The control of the shrines remains exactly as it was before the war, most of them being in charge of the Greek Orthodox Church. "Though the Turkish sultan or caliph no longer has control over Palestine, two Turkish soldiers still guard the entrance to the holy sepulchre, and Catholic, Orthodox, Armenian and Gregorian are allowed to enter only at a special time reserved for each. The difficult question of the shrines will be considered by an international commission this spring. The British refusal to make any change extends to everything in Jerusalem. One must get special permission, which is not easily obtained, to fix a hole in a roof or to relay cobblestones in the streets. The reason is that experts now studying the city aim at preserving all the historical places intact." Archbishop Keane said that American pilgrims and tourists are flocking

Procession for St. Philip Neri.

Rome, March 15.—(Associated Press)—For the first time since the fall of the temporal power, fifty-two years ago, a great religious procession traversed the principal streets of Rome yesterday in honor of the three hundredth anniversary of the canonization of St. Philip Neri, founder of the Congregation of the Oratory, Archbishops, bishops and other high prelates; members of the "Black" aristocracy, headed by Prince Massimo Barberini and Lancelotti, and priests and monks carrying lighted candles and torches, together with all the parish priests of Rome and large numbers of children singing as they marched, took part in the procession. Immense throngs crowded the street, clapping their hands and shouting "Vive St. Philip," as the procession passed.

Simultaneously another demonstration, made up of the members of about 100 Republican associations, paraded with red flags and bands through the Corso, the leading thoroughfare of the city, to the Capitol, where honor was paid to the memory of Giuseppe Mazzini, the Italian patriot and revolutionist, who died at Pisa March 10, 1872. During this ceremony shouts of "Long live the Republic" were heard.

There was an escort of carabinieri to both the processions to prevent disorder. The only untoward incident was a fight between Fascist and Republican, which was stopped by the police.

NORRIS GOV'T ASKED TO CONTINUE TEMPORARILY

Lieutenant Governor Requests

Norris to Remain Until Interim Supply is Voted.

Winnipeg, March 15.—(Canadian Press)—Lieutenant-Governor Sir James Aikins suggested to Premier T. C. Mr. Norris will tender the resignation of his Cabinet to the Lieutenant-Governor on Friday and ask advice as to future steps.

Government forces met in caucus this morning and decided that they should make no move to remain in power. If the Ministry is to carry on temporarily, pending an election, it will be as the result of the action of the Lieutenant-Governor and the Opposition leaders, it was said. Upon the meeting of the House this afternoon, the Premier expected to inform the members of his intention to resign and to ask an adjournment until Monday.
