Mr. J. C. Banoroff Davis is the author of the "case" demanding several thousand millions from England for consequential damages on account of misfortune of the republic, and is, therefore, a great man. Emperor William of Germany has gained some little notoriety during the past few years, being elevated from King of Prussia to Emperor of Germany, enabled to say his prayers on several victorious battle-fields, and was a person of some considerable consequence in Europe before Mr. Davis crossed the Atlantic in the first flush of his fame. The Emperor has, however, succeeded in attracting Mr. Davis's attention, and may be presumed to be happy. His policy, strategy, and devotion, his wisdom as an arbitrator, have not been exercised in vain, may not have to wait, like many other great men, for posterity to place the laurels on his brow.

Nothing else unusual occurred until seven minutes before twelve o'clock, when the performance was opened by a pair of scissors jumping from the table to the floor. At that time Mr. Lindenstruth was sitting in a chair, when, without the slightest premonition, a large brick fell with great force right beside him, breaking in two. He immediately picked up a piece of it and handed it to Mason and both found it hot. Then taking up the other piece he tried two or three times to break it by throwing it on the floor, but he failed. He then laid the second half on the sill of a window in the room, intending to bring it home. Resuming his seat near the front stoop, he was again startled by the piece he had placed on the window falling at his feet and once more breaking into two pieces. He did not pick it up again.

At about this time dinner was announced, when the family and many guests were seated at the table. Mr. Lindenstruth was seated at the end of the table, and the other guests were seated on either side of him. The dinner was served in the usual manner, and the guests were talking and laughing as usual. At about this time a man in a dark suit and a top hat entered the room, and went to the door. He was followed by a woman in a dark dress and a hat, who went to the door. The man and woman were talking to each other as they went.

Grand Jurymen Reported in Prison—Great Excitement in Town. Our Grand Jurymen are supposed to be composed of respectable men, and such is usually the case. A Grand Jury was lately summoned to attend the present session of the County Court in this city, and the liberty of the accused and the property of the litigants were freely placed in their hands. The car of justice rolled on smoothly until this morning when the public was startled by the following announcement in the News: County Court. The Grand Jury, having found a true bill against Charles E. Raymond, charged with forging the name of Lewis Carroll to a check for $100, was arraigned before the County Court yesterday morning, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to two years imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

Mr. George Stymest is foreman of the Jury, and it contains other men who, like him, have hosts of friends. These friends were thrown into a state of excitement by the announcement. They rushed to Canterbury street by hundreds, and sought an editor or reporter of the News. Around Mr. Stymest they fought and struggled for an audience. He calmly stood behind the elegant white car, and that protected the finance officer from invaders, placed a pen behind the ear that did not already support a pencil, folded his arms, and—the crowd became quiet in a moment. After learning that the crowd had come to the News, he immediately asked a statement made in the News was true, Mr. Stymest's indignation knew no bounds, and he kicked them into the office of the Chief. Mr. Willis looked up from the nineteenth page of a heading he was composing for an editorial paragraph, and looked inquiringly into the sea of eager faces. When he comprehended the nature of the information wanted he was indignant, but he did not knock the questioners. He looked upon them, pitied them and forgave them, for some of them were his constituents. He took down a file of the News, and read aloud in his eloquent and impressive manner— County Court. The Grand Jury, having found a true bill against Charles E. Raymond, charged with forging the name of Lewis Carroll to a check for $100, was arraigned before the County Court yesterday morning, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to two years imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

When he had ceased reading the crowd asked as with one voice—"Is it true?" The editor had quietly mentioned the veracity of the News to be doubted, for constancy's sake, but his constituents became severe when his dignity was infringed upon by a ruck to answer a question in reference to a local item, and he told them sternly that he never meddled with such trifles—that they must consult a reporter—and bowed them out. The crowd detached in several directions, one detachment heading for Mr. March at the School Trustees' office, another making for Mr. Patterson at the Custom House, and another heading for the residence of Michael McDade. They failed to get any information, the head of one branch of the loyal department referring them to another until they assembled at Chubb's Corner, held a consultation, read the Telegraph, found no report of the kind in it, and went in a body to ask Gordon Livingston. He told them that there could be no truth in the report as he had seen the Foreman of the Jury's night, had seen him again this morning, and had had a note from him within five minutes. Further inquiry convinced the friends of Mr. Stymest and his fellow jurymen that the report in the News was a cruel hoax. Mr. Stymest and the others did not plead guilty of forgery, were not sent to the Penitentiary for two years. We leave the News to the mercy of the outraged friends of the aggrieved.

Transient Advertisers. The large and steadily increasing circulation of the DAILY TRIBUNE warrants us in recommending it to merchants and traders generally, as a first class advertising medium. In order to secure as large an advertising patronage as we believe the Tribune deserves, we are induced to offer specially advantageous rates during the approaching holiday season, at any time, one or two months, with or without weekly charges.

Shipping Notes. The following vessels have recently been sold at Liverpool—"Casar," 1147 tons, built at Quebec in 1854, original class A 1 7 years, sold for $4450; "Bertha," 866 tons, built at Quebec in 1872, original class A 1 2 years, sold for $7000; "Talinia," 566 tons, built at Restigouche in 1857, original class A 1 7 years, sold for $3000; "Glenhaven," 1255 tons, built at St. John in 1876, original class A 1 3 years, sold for $2300; "Dunedin," 1294 tons, built at Quebec in 1865, original class A 1 7 years, sold for $5 per ton.

Why is This Thus? To the Editor of THE TRIBUNE: The News of yesterday morning chronicles the fact that a Water Street liquor dealer is reported for violating the liquor law, &c. I would ask why it is that the member of the Police force who visited the bar-room of a prominent hotel on Sunday, 23rd inst., and found therein a number of gentlemen indulging in "the ardent," did not report the fact to head quarters? Yours, etc. A.

Music and the Drama in Indianapolis. Two hundred persons of both sexes, all ages, and different colors, assembled in Hamer's hall, Indianapolis, last evening, to witness the Prince Albert Section of the Cadets of Temperance musical and dramatic entertainment. In the musical part Miss Upton and Mr. Hugh Campbell did remarkably well, and deserved the frequent bursts of applause with which they were greeted. The dramatic portion of the show was as good as could be expected from juveniles who had never previously appeared before an audience. Disorder prevailed extensively during the whole evening. The occupants of a portion of the front seats forgot, for the time being, the purpose for which the seats were intended, and stood back portion of the audience. Many ladies accompanied by their beaux or husbands left the building ere the performance had closed. The remainder waited to witness the close of a gathering which for burlesque, disorder, and general confusion, ran scarcely to be excelled.

Disagreeably Stabbed. Samuel McKelvey and other youths were wrangled around the graceful form of Mag Miller, in front of John Riley's den on Sheffield street, last evening, and Riley came out and struck McKelvey, whom he charged with breaking his bar room window on Saturday night. The gentle youth picked up his coat from a neighboring doorstep, took a sheath knife from his pocket, and stabbed his assailant in the body. Dr. Daniel found the wound dangerous. McKelvey has not been found by the police.

A Bridegroom's Misfortune. Mr. James McConnell, bride and shoe dealer, was called from the side of his blushing bride of an hour last evening by the alarm of fire. In crossing a back yard he jumped upon an empty boghead, lost his balance, and fell, seriously injuring his back and chest. We would be sorry for Mr. McConnell's misfortune at any time, and are doubly sorry now that he is a bridegroom. We hope to see him fully restored in a few days.

At about this time dinner was announced, when the family and many guests were seated at the table. Mr. Lindenstruth was seated at the end of the table, and the other guests were seated on either side of him. The dinner was served in the usual manner, and the guests were talking and laughing as usual. At about this time a man in a dark suit and a top hat entered the room, and went to the door. He was followed by a woman in a dark dress and a hat, who went to the door. The man and woman were talking to each other as they went.
