Three friends in Autumn

These rowan berries laugh up at me through the lips of the old white cup.

Call

Evening, yarrow etched in frost, ice on the stream - Now the proud elk trumpet!

One great blue heron Punctuates a line of weirs
Beyond the sandbar

On the Proposed Destruction of Garneau

The university,
Because it's growing,
Is going to gobble Garneau
Because it's there.
Then, theoretically,
A squirrel could travel
All the way from the Groat Road to the ninth street bridge, Never touching the ground;
Leaping from faculty to faculty,

Provided, of course,
It had matriculated.

love poem

you bring me the country at night (you said a prairie lady would need those wide open spaces)
i watch you by candlelight tading off your skins laying your poems before me
