

SPRUCINE

The Leading Cough Remedy of the Day.

SPRUCINE having had a thorough public trial covering a period of over 25 years, consequently its efficacy and value in pulmonary affections has been well established.—It is palatable and pleasant to the taste, containing nothing deleterious in its composition, will allay all irritation of the air passages, produce easy expectoration, check the Cough and restore the Throat and Lungs to healthy condition.—Persons suffering from Chronic Bronchitis or an habitual Cough during the winter months, or to spasmodic fits of coughing during the night will find SPRUCINE prompt in relieving the same.—No person who has once used it will on any account be without it.

If you have a Cough, Cold or any Bronchial trouble however slight do not neglect it, as the irritation may extend and consequently some incurable disease be the result.

For sale everywhere. Price 25 cts., or by mail on receipt of price.

Stephen Gwynn, M. P. of Galway, Ireland.

A Grandson of Smith O'Brien.

The Irish National Party, and not the Irish National Party alone, but the House of Commons, have just had a most valuable addition to their members by the election of Mr. Stephen Gwynn as representative of Galway. Stephen Gwynn is a man of intellect and of high education, who won much university distinction and has made for himself a great success as an author of books and a writer for reviews and magazines. The family to which he belongs would secure for him of itself a welcome to the hearts of all true Irishmen at home and abroad, for he is by the mother's side a grandson of Smith O'Brien, who was condemned to death for the leading part he took in the Irish Rebellion of 1848. According to the barbarous practice which was still maintained by the criminal laws in those days, he was sentenced in the courthouse of Clonmel to be hanged, drawn and quartered. The sentence was, however, commuted by the late Queen Victoria into one of transportation for life, and some eight years after he received a free pardon. Smith O'Brien was himself a man of high family and of an absolutely stainless life, which he devoted thoroughly to what he believed to be the service of his country. His attempt at insurrection was indeed wild and hopeless, but his feelings, like those of the vast majority of Irishmen, had been stirred up to wildness by the extravagant measures of repression which the English Government had been putting into force with the hope of crushing the Young Ireland movement. My countrymen throughout the United States will certainly not be inclined to welcome Stephen Gwynn's political triumph any the less because he is the grandson of Smith O'Brien. Gwynn would himself be a valuable addition to any political party, and he has ever proved himself a sincere and devoted Irish Nationalist. He comes out from his literary and scholastic study to lend his help toward the great national movement, and I am confident that he will win for himself a distinction in that path of life, as he has already done in other paths. I may mention the fact that he is the author of the life of Thomas Moore, published last year in Messrs. Macmillan's series, "English Men of Letters," which won wide favor among the reading public here. Let me add that a Celtic Cross has been or is at once to be planted by a large number of Moore's admirers over his grave in an English county, and that the cross is to be unveiled with appropriate ceremonial on the 24th of the present month. My friend, Stephen Gwynn, therefore, comes doubly recommended to the admiration and the hopes of his fellow countrymen all over the world as the grandson of Smith O'Brien and the biographer of Thomas Moore. His new book, "The Fair Hills of Ireland," has lately been published by Messrs. Macmillan, and I hope to write something more about it in my next letter. It appeared shortly before the Galway election. Gwynn's novels are, I am sure, well known to my American readers; they are both about Ireland—"The Old Knowledge," a story of the present day, and "John Maxwell's Marriage," a very powerful story of the Georgian epoch. He has also done great work for the revival of Gaelic in Ireland, and has both written poems in and translated poems from the Gaelic. His election speeches show that he is likely to have a great success in the House.—Justin McCarthy, in the Independent.

The Pope and His Physician.

The appointment of the Holy Father's new physicians, Professor Marchisava, the extraordinary physician, and Dr. Petacci, the physician in ordinary, has already been notified. The former is, like Dr. Laponi, a native of the Marches of Ancona, has a very large practice, is especially sought after for lung, chest and throat affections, figures in most of the more prominent medical cases as special and consulting physician such as he now becomes to the Pope, and occupies the chair of Pathology in the Royal University of Rome (sometimes the Sapienza). He is one of the very best diagnosticians in Rome. Dr. Petacci has a large practice, especially in the Curia, and he is remembered as physician-in-charge for most of the Cardinals invalided during recent years, such as Cardinal Gotti and Cardinal Ajuti. The charge of the Pontifical Archdiocese is suppressed. Like most institutions it tended to find its historic when its day was almost done, for Dr. Laponi confided to me in strict secrecy during 1904 that he was not only writing his memoirs, but was also well on with a history of the Papal physicians. He wished for better data than he possessed about Cardinal Hugo Atratus (Hugh Black), an Englishman, who filled the position which the Jews most often got—plain proof that the Popes of the so-called "Dark Ages" treated the Israelites not as M. Clemenceau treats ex-diplomatists.

The Average Man and The French Crisis

The first impulse of the average man is to lay the blame for the present crisis wholly on the Pope. Thus we find the whole London press uniting in a chorus of condemnation. Well, of course, any stick is good enough to beat the Roman dog with, but, for our part, when Rome (which is supposed to be not wholly destitute of worldly wisdom) does precisely the thing she was expected not to do—the thing, too, which looks absolutely fatal to her own interests—we are inclined to pause and to ask ourselves whether, after all, the Papal "Non possumus" is as foolish and as wicked as such impartial critics as MM. Clemenceau and Briand would have us believe. We should really like to know how many of the good folk who blame the Pope for refusing to permit compliance with the French law have the faintest notion how the law stands. If they had, they might possibly perceive that there are two sides to this question and that the Papal contention, whether right or wrong, is at least arguable.—Pall Mall Gazette, London.

The Blessed Virgin Mary.

The peace which Christ came to bring upon earth has been much disturbed lately by those heretics who, from high places in the Church, have been denying the virgin birth of the Saviour. We cannot look with indifference upon the attempt to tone down the faith of the Church to suit reason. We take it ill that any one should give the lie to the Archangel Gabriel. We cannot think as meanly of the historical accuracy of such historians as Matthew and Luke as do these new heretics. To us it is a vital matter that our Lord was born of the Virgin Mary, for it assures us of the sinlessness of His humanity, and the integrity of His divinity. The Virgin Mary does not thereby become an object of adoration. She remains the sweet, humble "handmaiden of the Lord." Her wonder at the Incarnation becomes our wonder, and her Magnificat the Church's song of praise.—The Lutheran.
