THE CATHOLIG RECORD

For The Pilot. Let Sin Come Home. BY CHARLES M. WOODRUFF.

I shed no tears for England, None for her fallen lords; My heart bleeds for the lowly, The Heavenly Father's wards— A land once happy, rich and free, Cast down in hopeless misery By English greed I weep to see.

I've no reproach for Ireland, None for her angered sons; I condemn the fountain head From which foul murder runs. Assassination is a crime, But there's a greater many a time That has its spring in England's clime.

I scan the history of the past,
A joyous isle behold;
I see a country free from care
Destined for rust and mold;
For British murder, rapine, lust,
Into this vintage pure is thrust.
And thus result the mixture must.

I will not gorge the camel,
And spew the little gnat;
Poor Erin's sins to England's
Is to the ox a rat.
The jewel of consistency
That doth adorn so brilliantly
The crown of Truth's the gem for me.

I'll not dress the bully's wounds.
And leave his victim sore,
Nor scourge the wronged for blows returned
For vasier ills before;
Let England first her crime requite,
Return the bloom, take back the blight,
Forgive her then perhaps I might,

PRACTICE AS WELL AS IN FAITH—TESTI-MONY OF THE UNITED STATES MARSHAL -INTERESTING CATHOLIC FESTIVALS.

Santa Fe, N. M., June 27, A. D. 1882.—
"Festival of our Lady the Conqueror."
—As your widely read paper is one of the of 'Spanish origin and a large number of the aboriginal inhabitants of New Mexico, are now, and are more than likely to remain, Catholies. I may add that they are Catholies not in name only, but in word and deed also. It may be said they are not educated as well as they might be, and this is true, but I would to God that a great many of their more highly favored brethren of the Eastern States were as practical in the exercise of their religious duties as they are. You may accept it as a well-established fact that although the Mexican people are in a majority of may be ten to one of the entire population, yet it is perfectly safe to say that out of 100 crimes perpetrated not ten are by the Mexican people. Any of the government officials will tell you this. In fact, the professional robbers, thieves, and murderers among us are the soum of the States, who, having made their original haunts too hot for them, flee westward where the vast extents of sparsely in-habited country offer them the refuges they habited country offer them the refuges they seek in their lawless career. Shortly after my arrival here I heard a great deal of the unreliability of Mexican juries. Indeed, so often did I hear such charges repeated that I was led to believe there must be some truth in them. Fortunately I was compelled to attend a term of court in one of the most Mexican counties in the territory (it is about the same ties in the territory (it is about the same area as the State of New York), and after a close observation I was happy to learn that all such charges were scandalously libellous and false. I spoke to Judge Bell, who presided during the term, on the mathematical production of the same happy to the sam ter, and he assured me he never saw bet-ter nor more intelligent jurors, and at the ter nor more intelligent jurors, and at the close of court he personally complimented the Mexican jurors on their honesty, intelligence and fidelity in the discharge of their duties. So nauch for that slander. As I hope to have other occasions to refer to kindred matters, you will pardon me for a digression to give your readers an idea as to how religious festivals are observed and celebrated here. This morning about seven o'clock, a procession ing, about seven o'clock, a procession numbering several hundred men and numbering several hundred men and women, accompanied by bands of music, proceeded along the principal streets of the city to the Cathedral and were there dismissed. The arrangements of the cordismissed. The arrangements of the cor-tege was entirely different from our manner of doing such things. The men are ranged along one side of the street and the women on the other, leaving the intermediate space open. At intervals between the ranks and on the middle of the street the flags and banners of the various so cieties are carried. About midway of the procession a statue of the Blessed Virgin is procession a statue of the Blessed Virgin is borne on a platform beneath a canopy, both of which were elegantly ornamented. Im-mediately following the statue marched the venerable pastor of the Cathedral, clad in full priestly vestments, and surrounded by a troop of acolytes in neat and pretty surplices. But the most attractive feature of the procession was the size of the Size surplices. But the most attractive feature of the procession was the girls of the Sisters' schools, numbering about 300, all clad in snow white dresses and veils. At intervals the solemn sound of prayer arose softly on the cool morning air, thus imparting a feeling of solemnity to the scene which was most impressive. I noticed many more carrying their beads in their hands and repeating aloud the prayers of hands and repeating aloud the prayers of the holy rosary. The occasion of this religious display is given as follows: Sev-eral years after the first conquest of this country by the Spaniards a great revolt took place among the aborigines. Almost immediately the Spaniards were over-THE CONQUERORS BECAME THE CONQUERED. THE CONQUERORS BECAME THE CONQUERED. Every vestige of their presence was obliterated. Churches were destroyed, houses pulled down, mines filled up, and general ruin and devastation ensued. Every person who had embraced Christianity was compelled, under pain of instant death, to renounce the faith. All who had contracted marriage were forced to violate their vows, and attempts were made to destroy the rite of baptism by washing the neophytes in the mountain streams. For the time being the Spaniards bent to the storm and retreated southward, but, obtaining reinforcements, they returned, completed the subjugation of the native tribes, and held undisturbed possession of the country. In honor of this great event the country. In honor of this great event a statue was erected in the Camp Chapel a short distance from here, and a perpetual Novena was promised to the Virgin Mother, to whose intercession the victory was attributed. Two hundred years have passed away since then, but faithful to the plighted vow of their gallant fathers, the Novena is performed, and the sons and daughters of the conquerors, on each returning anniversary, June 27th, repair in the early morning to the site of the ancient chapel which was dedicated to our Lady of the Rosary, and carry in solemn Lady of the Rosary, and carry in solemn

THE COSTIGAN RESOLUTIONS.

If a cable telegram from London is to be believed, the Imperial Government has censured the Canadian authorities for their action in regard to the Costigan resolutions. It appears' by the bve, that the British Cabinet does not read the Toronto Globe or it would have been Mr. Blake upon whom their censure would have fallen.

We believe that it is the right of any British subject, or body of subjects—of any individual, society or corporation, to present a respectful petition or remonstration to the Imperial Government, to the British Parliament, or either House of it, or to the Sovereign. We certainly do not think that either the Parliament or the Dominion of Canada is debarred from ex-ercising a privilege that is open to the

We might feel some regret at having curred the disapprobation of Mr. Glad-stone, if we thought that he spoke in the name of the people of the three kingdoms, and that he was their mouth-piece to ex-press their disapproval. We would still, however, do what we consider our duty even though feeling sorrow that we had in so doing to disagree with the mother country. But as it is, we have the con-solation of knowing that Mr. Glacstone, who presumes to censure Canada, cannot even command a parliamentary majority for shaping one of his most important measures, and that a general election would probably show that he has not the people at his back.

A British premier, who has shown his A British premier, who has shown his incapacity to govern one of the three kingdoms, who is incompetent to pass measures regarding it until he has turned its representatives out of the House and who is unable to protect the lives and property of British subjects abroad, but still drifts in the end into war, need not be so very impartient of well meant advice. be so very impatient of well-meant advice

Nothing could be more natural than the Canadians, having experienced the benefit of their own system of self-government, should think that some modification of it might be suitable for the kingdom, and that in the present crisis the experiment might be worth trying. It is no less natural that the people of Canada, more than a quarter of whom must have Irish blood in their veins, should feel some symmathy for the sufferings of those some sympathy for the sufferings of those of their own race, should express such sympathy and should suggest a remedy for the troubles in Ireland.

Such an expression of opinion as was contained in the Costigan resolutions, endorsed as they were by both Houses of the Canadian Parliament in the name of the people of Canada, was in no sense an impertinence, and that he should have stigmatised them as such is only another proof of the unfitness of Mr. Gladstone for his position.—Peterboro Review.

Two Mysteries. The existence of God is a mystery. We know most surely that God is, we know that He is infinite and eternal, the beginning and end of all things. But we cannot understand these things. When we begin to reflect on a Being, who had no beginning, and is changeless, we get lost, we come from light into darkness, or rather we get blinded with the excess of light. God is then a mystery, and it is most reasonable that God should be a is most reasonable that God should be a mystery. But the behaviour of men to such a God is also a mystery, but a degrading, shameful mystery. If those who believe in God were proud of being His creatures, if they adored and loved Him, and spoke of Him with awe and lived only for His pleasure, and in the hope of coming one day to behold and possess Him, then all would be right, all would be reasonable. But to believe in God, and to have neither fear nor love for and to have neither fear nor love for Him; to believe in Him and to scarcely bend a knee to Him in praise or prayer to believe in Him and show our belief mainly by taking His name in vain, by outraging and insulting Him; to believe in Him and to be ashamed of serving Him; to believe in Him and to make a mockery of Him, and to think we can cheat Him out of heaven in spite of His threats of hell—this is the conduct of many Christians, and I say it is an incomprehensible mystery, and a sham eful and horrible mystery.
