Kindness Pays

Kindness Pays—It pays because the world needs it as constantly as it needs the sunlight and the dew, and men could no more do without it than without food and raiment. It always pays to give the world what it really needs.

It pays because in kindness there is strength. It is not, as many suppose, a sign of weakness. It is a mark of strength which is truest and best. No man is so strong as he who knows the secret of gentleness.

It pays because it knows a greater strength than that of force. It can melt its way through many a place where all the terrors of force cannot drive a path.

It pays because it never has an ax to grind. It wins the world's good opinion by avoiding the very appearance of self seeking.

It pays because it represents the highest law of human society—the law of altruism.

It always seeks to serve the other fellow, and when it cannot serve him, it at least manages not to hinder him.

It pays because it is true, and men everywhere are looking for something that is really true. Whatever else it may not be, kindness is sincere and faithful.

It pays because it reacts on one's own character. Each time he remembers to be kind, he makes another reach toward the height of real kindness. It is thus that kindness never loses its reward.

It pays because it is often returned with interest, and if it is never returned at all, the angels do not forget to give credit.

Spring Prices of Shoes...

By the way of attracting attention from the price of eggs and the price of coal, the price of potatoes, the price of milk, rent, and canned potatoes, it has been decided by those who control these things that seven dollar shoes are to sell for twelve dollars in the spring.

This announcement, which will add a spice of zest, not to say gip, to the problems of providing the family with bread and cheese, after fitting them all out with shoes, was made by Montreal shoe retailers recently. They declared they were selling shoes from stock now at a lower price than they were paying wholesale for the new Spring ones.
