counties must have exceeded 200,000. This is not such a wonderful victory after all, especially when it is considered that the number of Dominion electors disqualified in the local contest is many times greater than the majority obtained

It has been suggested that the Domiters for Ontario have been badly beaten. We find however that Mr. Weite's county gives an opposition candidate a majority of 603; that Sir John Macdonald's county follows suit with a majority of 1119 . that Mr. Carling's constituency returns Mr. Meredith by 200 majority

LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE CON-VENTION.

The Liberal Conservative Convention assembly will be representative of the best intelligence and sentiment of the party in the county. Much pains have been taken to have the delegates chosen selected by the general party voice of the parishes they represent. No endeavor has been made to have them "instructed" in the interests of any particular candidate, so that when they assemble they will meet untrammelled by any promise, but to deliberate in the interests of the party. The present condition of affairs in the county forces upon the convention a demand for caution and prudence in their deliberations. 'Tis not animosities, prejudices or friendships that should con trol on such occasions. The result of a political convention should be arrived at only by a wise consideration of the best interests of the party, of the policies in which that party has been instructed and developed and of its relaforce to the building up and success of that party in the remainder of the country. That the decision of the convention shall be arrived at by these considerations is to be expected when we consider the intelligence and character of the delegates assembled. Parties are lined out on broad policies, but are generally bound together by a desire for local benefit, and he alone is the available man for any section of the party who can bring to the support of those broad policies the amount of intelligence and influence adequate to their enforce ment and success and at the same time secure an appropriate return of governmental recognition for the interests of the section he represents. We have faith in the convention to-day selecting a candidate that will meet with the approbation of the party in this county and feel that whoever he may be he will receive their unqualified support. We have always supported the Conservative party because we have always considered it a party of progressive ideas, and that from it have sprung those measures which have placed Canada in the position she to-day enjoys, and which are so portectous of a brighter future. We also believe this country now, more than ever, needs the continu ation of conservative rule. tegrated Canada has been united, a national spirit developed and a broader and deeper patriotism born under Con-servative administration, and it ueeds a continuation of that statesmanship that gave birth to and fostered these elements to give them an intelligent shape and direction. The candilate selected the Convention at Chatham to-day will therefore receive our support, knowing that in such a deliberative body, where the best sentiment of the party is represented, he cannot but be the real Liberal-Conservative standard bearer of the county of Northumberland. Our action is therefore decided by what we consider to be the best interests of the county, and by the determination to the county, and by the determination to be consistent with our record and to aid ness it has always been very difficult to that party and those policies we have
