The following is an extract from a letter written to the German Reformed Messenger, at Chambersburg, Penn:

A BENEFITRESS.
Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the most efficient Florence Nightingale of the Nursey. Of this we are sure, that we will teach our "Susy" to say, "A blessing on Mrs. Winslow" for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colicky, and teething troubles which WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP relieves the child from pain, and cures dysentery and diarrhoea. It softens the gums, reduces inflammation, cures wind colic, and eases the infant's suffering, and the teething period. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, even part of it—nothing less. We have never seen Mrs. Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her "Soothing Syrup for Children's Teething." If we had the power we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to infant race. Sold by all druggists. 25 cents a bottle.

HOBBLE MURDER.
LUCAN, Ont., Feb. 4.
About 12 o'clock last night a body of men, blackened and masked, entered the dwelling of the innocent and notorious Donnelly family and murdered the father, mother, one son and a girl—a niece. A small boy named Connor took refuge under the bed and escaped unhurt. They then set fire to the house which, together with the murdered bodies, was totally consumed. Another son, residing about three miles from the homestead, was called to his door about the same hour and shot. He is also dead. The township is wild with excitement.

The King of Bells.
The highest pinnacle of the cathedral of the Church of the Assumption, Moscow, is the top of the tower of Ivan Veliki, or the Great John, which is three hundred and thirty feet above the earth. At its foot, on a pedestal of solid granite, is the Tsar Kojok, or the King of Bells—the largest bell in the world. The original great bell at Moscow, called the Babel (the bell), was cast in the sixteenth century. After being raised and doing duty for many years it fell from its supports and was broken into fragments.

In 1654 it was recast, then being twenty one feet high, and eighteen in diameter, and its weight was estimated at two hundred and eighty-eight thousand pounds. It was suspended from an immense beam at the foot of the bell tower, and to ring it twenty-four men, who simply pulled the clapper, were employed. It again fell during the year 1706, and was a second time broken in fragments. In 1738 it was a third time cast with additional materials, and was given the name Tsar Kojok, or the King of Bells. It is now thirty three inches high, nineteen feet in diameter, measures sixty feet nine inches around its margin, and is said to weigh four hundred and fifty-three thousand seven hundred and thirty pounds. The following account of it is from Clarke's Travels:

The numberless bells of Moscow continued to ring during the whole of Easter week, ringing and tolling without intermission. The large bell near the Cathedral is only used upon important occasions, and yields the finest and most solemn tone I ever heard. When it sounds, a deep hollow murmur vibrates all over Moscow, like the fullest tone of a vast organ, or the rolling of distant thunder. This bell is suspended in a tower called the belfry of St. Ivan, beneath other bells, which, though of less size, are enormous. It is forty feet nine inches in circumference, sixteen and a half inches thick, and it weighs more than fifty-seven tons. The great bell of Moscow, known to be the largest ever sounded, is to be seen in the midst of the Kremlin. The bell is truly a mountain of metal. They relate that it contains a very large proportion of gold and silver, for which it was in fact the nobles and the people cast in as votive offerings their plate and money. I endeavored in vain to assay a small part. The natives regard it with superstitious veneration, and they would not allow even a grain to be filed off at the same time, it may be said the compound has a white, shining appearance, unlike bell metal in general, and perhaps its silvery appearance has strengthened their not given rise to a conjecture respecting the richness of its materials. On festive days the peasants visit the bell as they would a church, considering it an act of devotion, and they cross themselves as they descend and ascend the steps leading to the bell.
