

She Could Hardly Walk Across Room

St. John Woman Says Her Life Was a Burden—Restored To Health By Tanlac.

"Before I took Tanlac I was so weak I could hardly walk across the room, but now I can do all my household work with ease," said Mrs. Robert Clayton, of 25 Hanover St. St. John, N. B.

"For three or four years I suffered terribly from indigestion, which finally got so bad I had to live on a special light diet. My appetite was so poor I could scarcely eat anything and every morning I got up with a sickening sensation that I couldn't hardly endure. Just as soon as I ate anything gas would form on my stomach and cause such terrible pains around my heart it seemed that I couldn't retain my food and would just have to give up and lie down. At times I had such severe headaches I had to go to bed and I was troubled a lot with pains in my shoulders, neck and back. All the time I felt so tired and drowsy I could hardly stay up, and just to walk a few steps would tire me out completely.

"Finally I got to the point where life was a burden to me, but I happened to learn about Tanlac, and before I finished my first bottle I could see a wonderful change in my condition. I have taken three bottles now and my appetite is splendid, and although I am eating just anything I want, nothing hurts me the least bit. I never feel tired and drowsy and my housework is a pleasure. Tanlac is the grandest medicine I ever heard of, for it certainly has made life worth living for me."

Oil-Bearing Seeds

The number of plants which bear oily seed is very large. Some of the most important of these such as the Oil Palm, Brazil Nut, Peanut, etc., cannot be cultivated in Canada. Among those which have been tried in this country or which are worthy of trial are, Flax, Hemp, Soy Bean, Sunflower, Castor Bean, Opium Poppy, and Rape.

It is unnecessary to say anything about Flax which furnishes the valuable Linseed Oil so extensively used in the manufacture of paints, varnishes, linoleum, etc.

Hemp has ripened seeds each year for several years past at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. Hemp seed oil, though not equal in this respect to Linseed Oil, has good drying properties and is used for paints and varnishes, soft soaps, and for edible purposes.

Four varieties of Soy Bean obtained from different parts of the world have ripened seeds satisfactorily at Ottawa for several successive years. The oil contents averaged a little over 20 per cent. The oil is extensively used in China and Japan for edible purposes and the cake forms a valuable cattle food. In this country the oil is used mainly for soap-making. It has considerable drying properties and is also used to some extent for making paints.

Russian Sunflower have been cultivated with success at Ottawa. They are valuable honey plants and the dried stems can be used for fuel. Some specimens reached a height of 10 feet with heads 15 inches in diameter. The kernels may contain as much as 50 per cent of oil. The oil has a pleasant taste and is used to some extent for edible purposes, for making soap, and to some extent for varnishes.

But ripe seeds have been obtained mainly in warm or tropical countries each year from a number of varieties grown at Ottawa. The worst feature about this plant is that each seed capsule bursts when ripe and scatters the seed to some distance around, thus necessitating frequent collection of the seeds by hand. A variety was grown last year which does not appear to have this objectionable feature and will be further experimented with. An analysis of the whole seed, made by the Dominion Chemist, showed from 39 to 47 per cent of oil present. Castor Oil has very extensive uses, being employed for medicinal purposes, dressing leather, lubrication of machinery, soap-making, ointments, dyeing, and insulating material for electric cables.

Opium Poppy has grown satisfactorily at the Experimental Farm. The oil is edible and is also used for fine artist's paints.

Rape would probably grow in Canada but I have not experimented with it. It yields Colza Oil which, owing to its viscosity, ranks high as a lubricant. It is also used as an edible oil, for burning and other purposes.

Political Letter From Ottawa

Ottawa, April 23rd, 1921—The Government's ultimatum to the Grand Trunk, embodying a demand for surrender of control of the railway on or before May 16, was the feature of the parliamentary week. The ultimatum was put into the form of a bill, the Government desiring the fortification of its position by a statute, and there is no question but that the measure will be passed. In introducing the bill, the Prime Minister briefly reviewed the difficulty with the Grand Trunk, the assistance which the Government had granted that road beyond contract obligations and the facts leading up to the steps he proposed. Certain interests in London have been representing that the Government actions in regard to the railway were influenced by a traditional prejudice against the Grand Trunk, but no one, be he British investor or Canadian partizan, who reads the array of facts presented by Mr. Meighen can ever again successfully make such a charge. For the Premier showed that for years past, the Government of Canada has been almost lavish in its assistance to both the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific. The Transcontinental railway proved an utter failure; the Grand Trunk obligation to operate the Government section could not be fulfilled, and the Grand Trunk Pacific almost from its completion was a losing venture. In this circumstance the Grand Trunk had thrown upon it liabilities much beyond its ability to bear, and it is only by ignoring its moral and legal responsibilities to the Grand Trunk Pacific that the shareholders can make the shadow of a case for sympathy and consideration.

Nor can the Government be blamed for what may look like undue haste in desiring to get control of the Grand Trunk. The Grand Trunk Pacific is debtor to Canada to the amount of 62 millions on loan account, and a further sum of several millions of deficit in operating revenue, while the Grand Trunk is debtor to the amount of 77 millions, of which no less than 47 millions represents advances to the Company since the policy of acquisition was determined on. It is clearly evident that the Grand Trunk shareholders could not have kept the road out of bankruptcy had Government aid been withheld, and under the circumstances, the Government cannot be blamed if it revolts at the idea of being compelled to pour millions and millions into an enterprise which others control. Then, again, the Grand Trunk is essential to rounding out the National Railway system. That system has to be got under way as soon as possible; there has to be co-ordination of the two systems—Grand Trunk and Canadian National and drastic economies, so vitally necessary waits upon the acquisition of the former. In a word, the Government is striving desperately to remedy a situation that menaces the entire country, and the Grand Trunk, under its present control stands in the way.

Thus, what the Government proposes is that the shareholders of the Grand Trunk shall at once turn over their property. If possession and control is given, the Government will resume arbitration proceedings to determine what, if any, amount, up to a previously fixed figure, is to be paid for the preference and common stock of the railway. If possession and control be refused, then it is up to the Grand Trunk to do its own financing. The former choice holds out the prospect of a reasonable price for the property; the latter an almost certain ending in bankruptcy and complete loss. Under the circumstances, therefore, it is as good as certain that the Governments latest step will be crowned with success.

Next to the Grand Trunk, the most important subject to come before Parliament this week was the question of the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary to Washington. This post, provision for which was made as far back as two years ago, the money being voted to each successive session since, involves a new constitutional departure, one of those steps in the evolutionary growth of the Dominion which have become quite common since the war. It was taken after the fullest consultation and most complete loss. Under the circumstances, as well as with the practically unanimous consent of the Canadian Parliament. For the reason, however, that it is not easy to select a man qualified for the post also for reason that an election was held in the United States, involving a change of Governments at Washington, there has been delay in making an appointment, and this delay, unfortunately, has been misunderstood. It has been represented that the British Government was holding the matter up, that Sir Auckland Geddes visited Ottawa to quash the proposal, and that the Prime Minister himself was hostile to such a step. All this was set at rest this week. Mr. Meighen declared without qualification that he favored the idea, that it had become necessary, and he added that it was the intention of his Government to fill the post as soon as a suitable man could be found. The debate was notable for two things; the splendid, scholarly discourse of Sir Robert Borden on the constitutional development of the Dominion, and the We are still a Colony" speech of Mr. Fielding. The latter much to the disgust of the Autonomists in his own party, is still living back in Crown Colony days and views the growth of Canada into a status of equality within the British Commonwealth of nations as a menace.

The Prime Minister sails for London early in June. So far as is known the agenda of the proposed Conference has not yet been completed when it is complete, it is quite probable that it will be submitted to Parliament for discussion.
