

The Charlottetown Herald.

NEW SERIES

CHARLOTTETOWN, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1912

Vol. XLI, No. 18

TRY OUR Home-Made Preserves!

Made from home grown fruit. We have a large stock on hand. Sold in Bottles, Pails, and by the lb.

EGGS & BUTTER

We want EGGS and BUTTER for CASH, or in exchange for GROCERIES.

House Cleaning Supplies!

We Have a Full Line in Stock

Give us a call.

EUREKA TEA.

If you have never tried our Eureka Tea it will pay you to do so. It is blended especially for our trade, and our sales of it show a continued increase. Price 25 cents per lb.

R. F. Maddigan & Co.

Price $2.50

Amherst

Boots

Are the Farmer's friends.

Made from Solid Leather throughout, counters, in-soles and heels. They stand up and stand the strain of hard wear through all kinds of mud, slush and wet.

Men's Amherst Boots, $1.60 to $2.75
Women's " " 1.25 to 1.75
Boys' " " 2.00 to 1.50
Girls' " " 1.10 to 1.35
Children's " " 1.00

Alley & Co.

Montague

Dental Parlors

We guarantee all our plate to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded.

Teeth pulled and extracted absolutely painless.

A. J. FRASER, D. D.

Aug. 15 1906-3m

Join the Army of Successful C. B. C. "Grads."

Look up the records of nearly all graduates of the C. B. C. and you will find that they are holding down the most responsible, prominent and lucrative positions that an appreciative business world can bestow.

Wherever you go you will find men and women who owe their present success and prosperity to the practical business training which they secured at the C. B. C. From Sydney to Hong Kong and from Vancouver to Bombay you will find hustling, successful and enterprising people who would now be drudging at their tasks in their home town if it were not for the rich opportunities their C. B. C. training developed for them.

There's no need of staying in the ranks with the common crowd, no need of slaving away for a pittance when practical training will enable you to create your own opportunities for a richer, bigger and better future.

C. B. C. courses cover bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, business correspondence, banking, reporting, modern office practice, navigation and engineering.

Write today for free prospectus, C. B. C. blotter and full information.

Charlottetown Business College

AND INSTITUTE OF

SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING

L. B. MILLER - - - Principal

VICTORIA ROW.

FOR HEALTH AND COMFORT

Wear Stanfield's Underwear!

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

Into the Turmoil of Politics.

Another phase of this modern movement is the agitation which has been set on foot to draw women into the turmoil of politics. I do not refer now to their taking part in local affairs, especially those, such as the administration of workhouses, which are more or less of a charitable nature, and afford scope for their special energies, but to their claim to get the Parliamentary suffrage and to vote, and of course to set equally with men in Parliamentary elections. Hitherto this very grave question has been merely academic, and provoked a smile of amusement, rather than serious consideration. Now it has come within the range of practical politics, and it is for everyone to weigh well the consequences, immediate and remote, of so profound a change in our social conditions. Many women who will bear this letter read will think that it is impossible that a measure for which none of them have ever asked, which most of them regard as an absurdity, which public opinion in Ireland has not demanded, should be suddenly imposed upon us. Yet it is quite possible. The game of parties in Parliament often leads to strange results, and it is well for us in Ireland to realize the danger that, without our consent, this measure may become law, and the women of Ireland be placed in a position from which all their instincts and habits of thought would shrink.

Stanfield's in all the different weights.

Stanfield's "Green Label," a heavy ribbed Underwear, all pure wool, double breasted, well made; absolutely unshrinkable.....$2.00 a suit.

Stanfield's "Red Label," a heavier and finer grade, soft and warm, unshrinkable. All sizes.....$2.50 a suit.

Stanfield's "Blue Label," a very heavy line. Will keep you warm in any climate, no matter how cold. Won't shrink. All sizes.....$2.80 a suit.

Come in and have your Underwear needs supplied.

MacLELLAN BROS.

258 QUEEN STREET.

JOB WORK!

Fall and Winter Weather

Fall and Winter weather calls for prompt attention to the Repairing, Cleaning and Making of Clothing.

We beg to remind our numerous patrons that we have REMOVED from 23 Prince Street to our new stand

122 DORCHESTER STREET,

Next door to Dr. Conroy's Office, where we shall be pleased to see all our friends.

All Orders Receive Strict Attention.

Our work is reliable, and our prices please our customers.

H. McMILLAN

ONE VIEW OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

(New York Freeman's Journal.)

From the recent London Pastoral Letter of Right Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick, we take the following interesting remarks on the woman suffrage question:

The Sacrament of Marriage is the corner stone of human society, and, therefore, it has been left by its Divine Institutor, not to the guardianship of His Own Church, to whose jurisdiction it belongs no less fully than any other Sacrament or rite of our holy religion. And you see that as soon as men throw off the Christian faith, or lose a hold of its principles, one of the first practical consequences is an attack upon the marriage tie. What they call modern progress, in the moral order, may be measured by their divorce laws. They would put woman back again in her pagan condition, in pre-Christian times, and it is a sad fact, but an eloquent demonstration of the need of an inflexible guide in morals, as well as in faith, that the only religious body which now stands like a wall of brass against this onrush of human passion is our Holy Church. In Ireland we have been able by God's blessing to keep out this fatal evil, but we have to be on our guard against the advance of principles, and the admission of practices which are the first steps in the same direction. There has been for some years a movement to draw women from their homes, and to engage them in occupations which an elder generation thought entirely unsuited to them. Even in our Catholic schools one can perceive a spirit of publicity, a craving for notoriety, which is entirely new amongst us. For myself, I am convinced that the annual publication of children's names, and sometimes even of their photographs, must on educational grounds be injurious, and be fatal to hard work both for boys and girls; but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

For the man who must work out doors in winter, and be fast and hard work both for boys and girls, but for girls I regard it as the first step toward breaking down the delicacy and modesty which is their most precious possession. School should be a second home, and its work be almost private. This evil, however, although serious, is remote; but a far greater evil is already upon us, and seems to me to call urgently for attention. A considerable number of Catholic girls are following the courses of our Universities and Colleges in exactly the same conditions as young men, with no distinction between them in studies, or even social conditions, but thrown into large towns to rough it as best they can away from their parents and all the protection of home. In England they have special colleges in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and London for women. It is a strange thing, and suggests an unpleasant commentary on the drift of things that we have not one such College in Ireland, where we boast so much of our religious faith and the virtue and modesty of our women.

THE POOR DYSPEPIC Suffers Untold Agony After Every Meal.

Nearly everything that enters a weak, dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant; hence the difficulty of effecting a cure. Burdock Blood Bitters will relieve all the distressing symptoms of dyspepsia in a short time effect a cure. Mrs. F. C. Gross, Berlin, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach for the last seven years and tried all kinds of medicine for it, but none of them ever cured me, for as soon as I would quit using any of them, the same old trouble would come back. Last fall I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, and used four bottles, and now feel so strong I can do all my house work nicely and can eat almost anything without it affecting me in any way. "Our boy is also using it, he always complains of pain in his stomach and all over, like rheumatism, and as the age of ten had to stay home from school. He hasn't quite used two bottles yet, and is feeling good, can attend school regularly and eats heartily."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Tramp—Please help a cripple, sir. Old Gentleman—How are you crippled? Tramp—Financially, sir.

W. H. Wilkinson, Stratford, Ont., says: "It affords me much pleasure to say that I experienced great relief from Muscular Rheumatism by using two boxes of Milburn's Rheumatic Pills. Price a box 50c."

"You don't mean to say she has accepted him? He isn't at all her idea!" "Well, it didn't take her long to choose between a dance in the band and a ride in the bab."

Minard's Liniment cures Dandruff. Beware Of Worms. Don't let worms gnaw at the vitals of your children. Give them Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and they'll soon be rid of these parasites. Price 25c.

Milburn's Sterling Headache Powder give women prompt relief from monthly pains and leave no bad after-effects whatever. Be sure you get Milburn's. Price 25 and 50 cts.

Harry one day climbed up in a parlor chair, in order to reach something he wanted. "Don't get up in that chair with your feet, Harry, exclaimed his mother. "I just have to mamma," replied the little fellow. "I can't take my feet off."

Minard's Liniment cures Neuralgia. "Come Bob, get up," said an indulgent father to his hopeful son the other morning. "Remember, it's the early bird catches the worm." "What do I care for worms?" replied the young hopeful, "mother won't let me go a-fishing."

Minard's Liniment cures neuralgia. He—Good night, dear. We must not kiss or you will take my cold. She—Never mind—I can pass it on! She—You say you can't live without me. Sappho's I had not been born for another fifty years! He—I should have waited!

A WEAK ACHING BACK Caused Her Much Misery. Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes: "A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak aching back, which caused me much misery, for I could not work, and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights. I tried many kinds of pills and medicines, but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never troubled with a sore back or sick headaches. "I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine and can highly recommend them to any sufferer."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct, on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Portugal. The royal palace of Necessidades suffered from unknown hands. Objects of art, including some masterpieces of Benvenuto Cellini, have disappeared, and the wine cellars have suffered from Republican thirst. Even the royal automobiles have vanished into thin air. The Government, however, gives out the consoling news that the inventories made after the flight of Manoel have been preserved.

When Husband and Wife Disagree. The objection to giving votes to women is not that they would exercise the franchise with less judgment or honesty than men. In intelligence, in conscientiousness, in genuine desire for the public good, they are not inferior to men. That is not the objection. From the peace of their homes they would be drawn into the angry, and often squalid strife of political parties. Now they stand outside all such contentions. A man comes home from some turbulent scenes of an election contest, and in his home, under the influence of a good woman, the calm and quietness that are the one need of his soul at the time. But how would it be if his wife was an active participant in the same contest, and in his home, in which he might look for some cessation of strife, he found the same or even greater bitterness? Are we to contemplate the possibility of husband and wife taking opposite sides, and the peace and harmony of their family disturbed and their children divided into opposite camps with their parents? The very thought is shocking to every sense of Christian propriety. Are women to attend public meetings, and join clubs and leagues, and other such bodies, and, just as men do now, take an active interest in all political developments? It is not easy to see how such a life is consistent with the care of home and children, and regard for the great and important interests that now depend entirely on the woman of the house. Young women, who have no home or children to mind, may find time for such things, although not without grave damage to every feminine disposition and feeling, but for mothers of families it would simply mean the neglect of their children, with all their duties and responsibilities, and the loss of the reverence from husband and son. The husband by God's ordinance is the head of the family, and in all its external relations, its representative. He speaks and votes, and acts for wife and child, and it is nothing less than a reversal of the order that God has established to deprive him of that office, and set up his own wife to divide it with him, and it may be, oppose his action. If the wife is to vote and act with the husband, what is her gain of receiving the franchise? If she is to be free to vote and act against him, then the franchise for her is the readiest way to destroy her own legitimate influence, and with it banish religion from the home. In England we see with what fanatical violence this claim of women to divide political power with men is being advanced, and it is because I feel the danger that this monstrous deordination may, without the consent, and almost without the knowledge of the people of this country, be imposed upon us, that I feel it my duty to call attention thereto publicly to the danger.

Criminality Among The French Youth. PARIS, April 2, 1912. We have often had occasion to notice the startling increase of criminality among the young in France, a symptom so generally recognized and so alarming that even non-Catholic papers are bound to acknowledge its existence. In the eyes of Catholics of the Government schools, whose so-called neutrality is a sham, and whose rank irreligion is, in most cases, openly professed. The natural and logical consequence of this teaching is the casting away of the laws of morality, which, without the basis of religion, are not strong enough to act as a barrier against man's passions. When in 1882, M. Jules Ferry organized the lay schools, he openly stated that his object was to organize humanity without God. His system has now been in force for thirty years, and of its results the following statistics will give an idea: In 1886 the law regarding lay schools was not as yet in force all over France) there were 4,937 criminals among boys under sixteen, and 659 girls. In 1889 (when the law had been universally carried into effect) there were 6,743 criminals among boys, and 1,097 among girls. In 1897, the official statistics inform us that, taken as a whole, "the criminality of children under sixteen is almost double that of adults." In 1905 the statistics were such that the Minister of that day, M. Guyot-Dessaigne, is known to have modified them before he allowed them to be published; nevertheless, we gather from official reports that 35,000 boys and girls were, in the course of one year, condemned for criminal offences. It was ascertained, moreover, that out of 100 children condemned in Paris, 20 belonged to religious and 80 to lay schools; and that out of 100 boys, who were imprisoned at "la petite Roquette," eighty had been educated in the Government schools, eleven only in religious or free schools. A few days ago a young soldier, who was executed for murder, left a written declaration attributing his