

Household Hints.

FROM MISS MUNRO'S LECTURES.

There is not much nourishment in rice without the addition of milk or eggs.

Purple tinted beef has died a natural death.

Pork or veal is bad for poor digestion.

Scrape carrots slightly, as the sweetest portion is nearest the surface.

Take a thick peeling of turnips, as the outer portion is bitter.

Supper costs less than whiskey and does more good.

Never wash mutton; always scrape it lightly.

Cabbage should always be cut across the grain, and before cooking should be soaked in salt and water half an hour to kill the slugs.

Scurvy is not caused by salt meat, but by its poverty, the pickle having robbed the meat of its strength.

Better pay a little more for fresh vegetables than to spoil your dinner with stale ones.

Always boil puddings that contain suet.

You never can err in boiling a pudding half an hour over time.

To get the correct blending of flavor, use double the quantity of carrots you do of turnips.

Sew a piece of red braid on one side of your pudding cloth to distinguish it from the dish-cloth.

Boil potatoes with their jackets on.

Haddock is very nice for breakfast.

Carrots are very good for children.

Potatoes should be boiled very slowly, or else the strength will be boiled out of them.

There is a great deal of nourishment in cheese—cheese neither too old nor too new.

Celery and asparagus are exceedingly good for rheumatism.

A clean oven is as necessary as a clean stew pan.

Never throw away a scrap of fat.

Men employed in the open air ought to eat a good deal of cheese.

Mr. Underdonk Tupper Graphically Described.

Since my last we have had a further continuation of the Budget debate, and this has included the annual eruption of the Tupperian volcano. This is always one of the events of the Parliamentary season. Vesuvius and Etna are somewhat irregular as to the time of their demonstrations, but the Cumberland volcano is always sure to have an eruption some time early in the session of Parliament. People of all classes go out to see and hear it, but on such occasions there are, in addition to the rank and fashion of the capital, who have a love of gladiatorial shows, a more than usually strong representation from the alms, the men of low forehead and heavy jaws, who lean over the gallery rails with intense enjoyment of Tupperian methods. They feel flattered that for once Parliament is brought to their level, or they to the level of Parliament, now that amid the marble pillars of that high hall there is one man who rants and raves, hurls defiance and epithets in a manner so wonderfully like that to which they are accustomed in their own haunts of blackguardism. Attendance at the Tupperian eruption makes them feel quite parliamentary and respectable.

Viewed simply as a spectacle, aside from its moral aspects, the show is a very considerable one. You see the gathering storm in the face from which every lineament of man and humanity fades out. There remain the lines of hate, malignity and rage. It is a terrible face to anyone who calmly scrutinizes it at such a moment. When he speaks, one thinks of the "throat of brass and adamantine lungs" which Homer has attributed to one of his heroes, and of the "audacity, audacity, always audacity," of Danton. As for the rest, it is a lava tide of venom and vituperation, which pours and rushes for hours. The tide is directed against, and intended to scorch and destroy, the Opposition, but it is powerless to reach so far, and only scorches the mountain side from which it flows.

A thinking man, who has given little attention to politics and who heard Sir Charles the other night for the first time, would say: "It is incredible that so much malignity could be in the right." One who knew the events of our political history would wonder at the audacity of such a man, with such a record as his, who could hurl foul charges against such men as Blake, Mackenzie and Cartwright. The mile stones of the Tupperian journey from Spring Hill to the Pacific are marked with jobbery and corruption. Out of the mouth of his own colleague who sits beside him he had been denounced, a few years ago, as the high priest of corruption. And now, within a week of his great tirade against the Opposition, he has been taken in the very act of awarding a contract to his dear friend Underdonk at a price $200,000 above the tender of an old and responsible firm, whose ability and reliability have never been questioned. — Ottawa correspondence St. John Telegraph.

"Twenty-four years' Experience."

Says an eminent physician, convinces me that the only way to cure nervous exhaustion, and weakness of the sexual organs, is to repair the waste by giving brain and nerve foods, and of all the remedies compounded, Magnetic Medicine is the best. The Fashions.

New ulsters are loose.

Moire is used for parasols.

Spring jackets are very plain.

Curtain overalls are revived.

Shirred tabliers are unpopular.

Cotton satteens rival those of silk.

Ficelle, or twine lace, is a novelty.

Bishop's sleeves are on new wraps.

The latest fichus are long and narrow.

The velvet dog-collar remains in favor.

The coronet bonnet is already popular.

Pearl buttons are on stylish wool dresses.

Muslin embroidery trims cashmere dresses.

Polonaises have taken a fresh lease of favor.

Bengaline dresses are worn in light mourning.

A shirred puff finishes the neck of April dresses.

Pauers in lengthwise pleats are called valances.

India pongees are sold for $6 for a dress pattern.

Spanish lace over satin is used for spring mantles.

Pompoms of many colors appear on Easter bonnets.

Pale pink roses as large as pennies are sold for $2 each.

Japanese sleeves are on the new silk and satin wraps.

Embroidered balayouses are preferred to those of lace.

India shawls are made into mantles without being cut.

Satin foulard and chene silks make waterling place costumes.

Elder, sycamore and lichen green are stylish spring shades.

A big pouf bow, with wide ends, trims the back of new mantles.

Lace and passementeries have taken the place of fur trimmings.

Satin mervillous dresses have flourishes of cream mull embroidery.

American Easter cards this season excel those brought from England.

Long undraped redingotes appear beside bunched up Watteau polonaises.

"Flats" and shepherdess straw hats will be worn by little girls this season.

Condolence cards and birth announcement cards are novelties in stationery.

Last year's dresses need only slight changes of drapery to make them stylish.

Pineapple cloth fabrics are imported by Oriental merchants for ladies' dresses.

Spring fans are in various designs. Some are of lace and flowers, others are handpainted on satin, while others are made entirely of feathers.

Irish lace trimmed with clusters of shamrock leaves and forget-me-nots was the garniture of the green velvet dress worn by the Princess of Wales at the Queen's last drawing-room.

Suggests of Gold.

"He who speaks, sows; he who keeps silence, reaps." We need an age of silence when men excoitate great thoughts. The present one is fast running to mere wind and tongue.

"He who says what he likes, shall hear what he does not like." Learn to govern thy tongue.

"He expects better bread than can be made of wheat." Don't expect too much in this world. Where you find good you will also find evil.

"He that lies down with dogs shall rise up with fleas." Beware young men of evil companionship.

"If I am master and thou art master who shall drive the asses?" There are leeches of wood and drawers of water; all can't be masters. Somebody must do the rough work of the world. But no work, however humble, is dishonorable.

"Who paints me before, blackens me behind." The flatterer and calumniator often meet in the same person.

"Extremes meet." Old age ends in second childhood. The extremities alike of joy and grief find utterance in tears. Cold perverts the effects of heat and scorch as heat would have done.

"Charity begins at home." So it should but it must not end there.

"Honesty is the best policy." The man who acts on this principle is a rogue. He will cease to be honest when an opposite course will serve his interests better.

"Every man has his price." A sad reflection on the moral integrity of the human race.

"Sit in your own place and no man can make you rise." Genuine and manly self-assertion. Know what your place is and keep it against all comers.

"A bad book is the greatest robber." Young people, beware of bad books, when they as you would a serpent. They poison the mind, debauch the morals and destroy the soul and body.

MIDDLE AGED MEN often lack vigor, this can be restored by that great brain and nerve food, known as Mack's Magnetic Medicine. Read the advertisement in another column of to-day's paper.

Do Not Be Deceived.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by Geo. Rhynas. [4]

Selections from "George Eliot."

From Adam Bede.

We are apt to be kinder to the brutes that love us than to the women that love us. Is it because the brutes are dumb?

When death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity.

Our dead are never dead to us until we have forgotten: then they can be injured by us, they can be wounded.

They know all our penitence, all our aching sense that their place is empty, all the kisses we bestow on the smallest relic of their presence.

Decent burial was what Lisbeth had been thinking of for herself through years of thrift with an indistinct expectation that she should know when she was being carried to the churchyard, followed by her husband and her sons; and now the felt as if the greatest work of her life were to be done in seeing that Thias was decently buried before her—under the white thorn, where once in a dream she had thought she lay in a coffin yet all the while saw the sunshine above and smelled the white blossoms that were so thick upon the thorn the Sunday she went to be church after Adam was born.

But the sudden death of her husband had restored him in these hours to that first place in her affections which he had held six and twenty years before; she had forgotten faults as we forget the sorrows of our departed childhood, and thought of nothing but the young man's kindness and the old man's patience.

I've a strong feeling about the dumb things as if they wanted to speak, and it was a trouble to 'em because they couldn't. I can't help being sorry for the dogs always, though, perhaps, there's no need. But they may well have more in them than they know how to make us understand, for we can't say half what we feel with all our words.

I like to go to work by a road that'll take me up a bit of a hill, and see the hills for miles around me, and a bridge or a town, or a bit of steeples here and there. It makes you feel the world's a big place, and there's other men working in it with their heads and hands besides yourself.

It's a strange thing to think of a man as can lift a chair with his teeth, and walk fifty miles on end, trembling and turning hot and cold at only a look from one woman out of all the rest of the world.

I've noticed it often that the strong skilful men are often the gentlest to the women and children; and it's pretty to see them carrying the babies as if they were no heavier than little birds, and the babies always seem to like the strong arm best.

Troubles come to us all in this life; we set our hearts on things which it isn't God's will for us to have, and then we go sorrowing; the people we love are taken from us, and we can joy in nothing because they are not with us; sickness comes and we faint under the burden of our feeble bodies; we go astray and do wrong and bring ourselves into trouble with our fellowmen. There is no man or woman born into this world to whom some of these troubles do not fall.

Gossip.

Mr. S. Gilmore has sold his hotel for the sum of $2,800 cash to Mr. Campbell, of Mount Forest. Mr. G. is going to the North-west.

On Tuesday morning at 4 a. m., a fire broke out in the boot and shoe store of Mr. Jas. Crookery, completely destroying his entire premises with out-buildings. A part of the contents were saved. Mr. Crookery's loss will be about $3,000, partly covered by insurance. He has the entire sympathy of the whole community in his severe calamity.

Nine Physicians Outdone.

It is generally considered a pretty difficult task to outdo a physician, but the following will prove conclusively where nine were completely outdone. Mrs. Helen Flarviz, 331 Gayton St., Chicago, was treated for Consumption by nine physicians, and all pronounced her case incurable. Seven bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption completely cured her. Doubting ones, please drop her a postal and convince yourselves. Trial bottles free at Rhynas's Drug Store. Large size $1.00. [4]

Dr. P. Meredith, of Cincinnati, says: "About one ago I took a cold, which settled on my lungs. A violent cough was the consequence, which increased with severity. I expectorated large quantities of phlegm and matter. During the last winter I became so much reduced that I was confined to my bed. The disease was attended with cold chills and night-sweats. A diarrhoea set in. My friends thought I was in the last stages of Consumption, and could not possibly get well. I was recommended to try ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM. The formula was shown to me, which induced me to give it a trial, and I will only add that my cough is entirely cured, and I am now able to attend to my profession as usual."

IT IS WELL KNOWN TO CAREFUL observers that the injudicious use of strychnine is as mischievous in its ultimate effects as whiskey and opium. By protracted over-stimulation of the nerve centres organic changes are induced which arrest the nutrition of the ganglia and excite a morbid irritability that becomes chronic and may be transmitted to offspring. Where increased functional activity is wanted WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calaisa supplies to elements of nerve nutrition.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

It excites expectoration and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; changes the secretions and purifies the blood; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. SECURE THE IMMEDIATE AND SATISFACTORY EFFECT that it is warranted to break up the most distressing cough in a few hours time, if not of too long standing. It is warranted to GIVE ENTIRE SATISFACTION, EVEN IN THE most confirmed cases of Consumption. It is warranted not to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies), or affect the head, as it contains no opium in any form. It is warranted to be perfectly harmless to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. There is no need to fear any temporary sickness, as when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM is present it is fully taken in time. Physicians having consumptive patients, and who, having failed to cure them with their own medicine, would recommend to give ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM a trial. Sold by all Druggists.
