Geo Dagg or his family never had an angry word with any of his neighbors and never had an enemy till a couple of months ago, when some people, he says, took umbrage over a disputed side line and since that "never speak as they pass by." He cannot account for the awful events which have been transpiring since September 29th. On that day he says his wife went out to the shed to get material for dinner and found that some one had for dinner and found that some one had shelf was found lying on the floor, some spilt all the milk, thrown the butter broken, some unburt. Soon afterwards, the men having gone to the barn, the the mud, rendering it perfectly useless for consumption. Three days before he had given his wife $7 to put away. iron-fingered person with a grip like a vice. The troubles of George Dagg are terrible to think of, and yet he declares that he will not leave the weird and bewitched place until the perpetrators of the outrage have been found, whom the "witch of Plum Hollow" told him were a woman and her two children, when he went some days ago to consult her as to the cause of the place being haunted.

Mr Dagg has tried to get his wife and family to leave the house and go to Mrs Dagg's father's, but they prefer to stick to him and the place until a discovery is made. That this will be done soon the is no doubt, as the dwellers in the "haunted house" have increased, until now nearly a score of people stop there, taking watches by turns, ready to fathom the mystery of Carendon Front.

Consumption may be more easily pre-vented than cured. The irritating and harassing cough will be greatly relieved by the use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam that cures coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles.
