section of the country for years, passed over this place during the night between the 5th and 6th inst. The rain poured down in torrents, the flashes of lightning succeeded each other in rapid succession, making the night almost as light as day, and these were followed by the most terrific peals of thunder we have ever heard. During the storm the lightning struck the brick residence of Mr. John Brennemann, in the outskirts of the corporation, doing considerable damage by tearing up the roof, splintering the rafters and beams, and breaking a large number of window panes. Fortunately none of the inmates received the slightest injury beyont being considerably frightened.

Court of Quarter Sessions.

Thursday, June 11.

Thursday, June 11.

The prisoner was put upon trial charged with the larceny of a shirt, gloves and a some other small articles from the store of Mr Aldhous, Hillsburg. There was no defence. Verdict, Guilty.

The Queen vs. Henry Powell...—The prisoner was charged with having stolen a pocket-book containing about $60 in money, together with some promissory notes (among them one against himself.) from a Mr Tuck, a short time ago. It appeared that the prosecutor was on a collecting tour, and came at night to the prisoner's house, near Ghenallan, in the township of Peel. They had been burned out a short time before, but arranged for Tuck's staying for the night by him and the prisoner's house, near Ghenallan, in the township of Peel. They had been burned out a short time before, but arranged for Tuck's staying for the night by him and the prisoner sleeping together, while Mrs Powell occupied another bed with the servant girl. The prosecutor, watching over his valuables with jealous solicitude, had rolled the pocket-book and a pair of braces in a handkerel'ef, put them into a pocket of his coat, and put the coat under his head. At least he thought he did all these things. About two o'clock he awoke from a dose, for he appears to have been too suspicious to sleep sound, and found that the prisoner had been out of doors, and when he arose in the morning and discovered that his pocket-book was gone, but that the braces and handkerchief still remained, he was impressed with the belief that priso er instead of being up on a natural occasion, as had been asserted, was secreting the pocket-book. The evidence of the prosecutor was very contradictory. Mr Peterson for the Crown; Mr Guthrie for defence. Verdict not guity.

In the case of Michie 2. Ternan the jury returned first with a verdict for the defendant. The judge wanted a special, and not a general verifiet, and he accordingly sent them back, having given them some written questions to answer. They returned with the answers, which were not exactly to the purpose, and H

FRIDAY, June 12.

QUEEN cs. DEACON.—This was a case of pound breach. Eight pigs belonging to the defendant, who lives in Luther, were impounded on the 29th of April last. The poundkeeper having in a neighbourly manner informed the defendant that his pigs were in durance vile, defendant asked him what was to pay. He was told that the damages according to by-law were 50 cents per head. Defendant offered a smaller sun, and when it was refused took up an axe and having sworn considerably broke the lock, and took the grunters home with him. Verdict, guilty. SAUNDERS, Assignee of Carter, rs. CHAMBERS.—This was a suit brought by the Assignee of David Wells Carter, an Insolvent, to recover from defendant, Chambers $175 alleged to have been paid by insolvent to defendant within the thirty days next preceding the assignment. To ensure his success it was necessary that the plaintiff should be able to prove clearly the payment of the sum within the time specified, and his counsel not being able tode so accepted a non-suit.
