seven events of the regatta were started punctually on time and no tedious delays were experienced by spectators or con-testants. The arrangements were ample and well carried out. One serious draw-back however was the absence of a gun or firearm at the finishing boat, and as a con-away before they knew that they had put in the measurement. The course was laid out along the city ide of the bay. The starting boats were anchored nearly opposite the glucose fac-tory and the finishing judge's boat was anchored a mile and a half to the west, nearly in front of the Northern elevator. The tug boat Maggie Mason managed to make herself decidedly offen-sive by crossing the course three or four times just before the first races were start-ed and making it uncomfortable for the oarsmen. The subscribers' boat, the On-tario, did the same thing on one occasion. The referee, time-keepers and press men steamed away from the York street wharf on the city side, and the Torontos were between the two. A couple of hundred of yards west of Simcoe street the Argon-auts were leading by a full length. The Nantilus kept edging over to the city side, and they went so far as to completely pocket the Torontos. From the referee's boat it was difficult to follow the crews with certainty after the Torontos were pocketed. The Torontos seemed to be pumped out, while the Argonauts were pulling a strong, fresh stroke. The Nau-tilus tut straight across the bow of the Torontos and ran as straight into the Ar-gonauts, staving in the rear end of their boat. This occurred about 400 or 500 yards from the finish. After the foul the two leading boats came al-most to a standstill. The Torontos then pulled up after them, and it is at this writing quite uncertain whether the Torontos got clear of the foul; but the Nau-tilus crew, who lost their rudder, claim that it was wrenched off by the Torontos coming up in the rear. The Nautilus crew were solely to blame for the foul, as they pulled direct into the water of the pocketed crew and then fouled the Argo-nauts. Before the three crews could re-cover from the foul, the Leanders and the Chathams had pulled up on them. The Leanders made a big break for the lead.

The Argonauts and Nautilus did not re-cover their positions, but the Torontos soon pushed up. The finish all at once be came very indefinite. The Leanders and Chathams passed over the line nearly together. The finishing judge said the former was first, while the To-rontos claimed that notwithetanding the foul they crossed the line first. The latter ex-plained that she had attempted to drown herself, but could not account for her maniacal condition. One said he had been in her company all afternoon. She was a married woman and they had had two or three glasses of beer, when she suddenly appeared to go mad and commenced to batter her head against a wall as if bent on suicide. were declared the victors by their own friends. At 9.30 Mayor Boswell, in the absence of Governor Robinson by sickness, pre-sented the prizes in the boat house of the To-ronto club. He said the regatta was the most successful he had ever seen but for the ohe accident. Col Otter was called upon to present the cup and watches to the Torontos. In doing so he said he had done just what he thought was right. He said it did not make a bit of difference to him who won. While the prizes were being presented the Argonauts were cheer-ing lustily in their club house adjoining. The greatest excitement prevailed last night over the result. The Argonauts were disgusted and the Torontos were jubilant. After giving so much space to the deand hind to be to be they captured her again. The gentleman hardly listened to their story, but posted to Hanlan's Point for a policeman, being suspicious that all was not right. He brought an officer back with him, and found the unfortunate still struggling for freedom in the midst of a considerable crowd. The woman was by this time completly wild and tore and raged and kicked at a terrible rate. She lay in the sand writhing and screaming and biting as if she were possessed of devils. Six men had all they could do to hold her. They finally get her down to the wharf, whence she was taken with no little difficulty across to the mainland and zhence to the central police station. All the way she fought and screamed like a tiger and disturbed the peace and pleasure of the island for the rest of the night.

The Dons entered a protest in the junior fours on account of their foul, but the protest never reached their referee's hands.
