DAY OF DISAPPOINTMENTS

Attendance at Four Meetings of the Pan-American Congress—Five Thousand People Go to Massey Hall Under a Disunion—Congress Officials Suppressed the Facts Till the Meeting Had Commenced.

The second day of the Pan-American Congress of Religion and Education was very disappointing. The morning session in the Pavilion was very thinly attended; the three sectional meetings in the afternoon were well attended, and the two announced attractions for the big meeting in Massey Hall at night were disappointing.

When the Pan-American Congress resumed business at 10 o'clock yesterday there were about 300 ladies and gentlemen, mostly citizens, in the Pavilion. President Smith and a dozen ministers were on the platform.

The first paper was read by Hon. Henry Wade Rogers, president Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., on "Christianity and Education." The learned doctor's address was an able plea for religious education. He showed the connection of biblical instruction with the universities of both continents. He was applauded when he avowed that the interests of society are not secured in a system which turns out brains minus conscience.

With gladness he noted that the old intolerant and narrow spirit which proscribed investigation, even in regard to evolution, is largely a thing of the past. Educational methods should be so shaped that they would turn out men of character, faith and reverence. The atmosphere of religion is the natural and best medium for the development of character.

Rev. D. M. Beach of Cambridge, Mass., spoke on "Municipal Reform." He wore his conventional top coat and black coat. He spoke extempore, and praised Massachusetts' methods of reducing the number of saloons. The result had been to place Cambridge in the forefront of American cities as regards municipal reform.

His two topics were the great triumph over the threatening factor of municipal life, the saloon, and the renovated city the outcome of this reform. He generously praised the cooperation of the Roman Catholics in the saloon reform.

The speaker revelled in figures to show the moral and material improvement which Cambridge has undergone during the past five years with clean bars.

Bad For the Tramps. No saloons was very bad for the tramp industry—laughter—but very good for the savings banks. The speaker said last winter, when there was so much distress amongst the tramps, he had in the large American cities, Cambridge was in "heavenly peace"—all had something laid in for the winter.

Statistics never can tell the resultant blessings of Cambridge municipal reform. One special blessing was that Roman Catholics and Protestants are now united. The saloon used to put them at odds; since it had gone "we love each other well." (Applause.) The "bridge idea" had come to represent all that was noble in our city—and this for the example of other cities. "When things have come to this pass in Toronto—I don't know whether you have a Toronto municipal idea—laughter"—the salvation of your city will have come. (Loud applause.)

Entirety of Public Schools. Hon. Charles R. Skinner, State Superintendent Public Schools, Albany, N. Y., read an able paper on "What America owes to Public Education." His answer was "Everything." Under the designation America he included the Dominion of Canada. The speaker said that the Canadian system of public schools approximates nearer to that of England than does that of the United States.

Hence English educationalists do not visit the schools of Ontario because the lines of demarcation are not sufficient to justify a journey of inspection. Mr. Skinner waxed eloquent on the physical and mental benefits of public school education. He attributed the political freedom of the States and the uprising of great statesmen to the good primary education over the country.

Religion had nothing to fear from education. The power of the Prince of Darkness is impelled by knowledge. There is no better way to outwit the devil than general education. Immoral, irreligious teachers are rarely found, and, if found, promptly dismissed. The trend is for more highly trained and pure teachers. The army of teachers have instilled into our youth, usefulness, integrity, love of truth and equity of intellect. They have taught simple, practical, every-day morality. They have been a bulwark for moral righteousness, and religious truth, against which no enemy hath prevailed. Pensions for teachers the speaker warmly advocated.

No Political or Sectarian Bias. In conclusion, the speaker eloquently laid down that public schools should be above sectarian and political control in both Canada and the States. He did not imply that the schools should be irreligious. It simply asserts the disinterestedness of church and state. Absolute freedom from all sectarian control is the only foundation for public schools, where all citizens have equal rights and no interference with our public schools in what Americans do not want and will not have. (Loud applause.)

Afternoon Sessions. Three meetings were announced for 3 o'clock yesterday: Young People's section, St. Andrew's Church; King-street; Educational section, St. James Square Church; and Philanthropic section, Metropolitan Church.

At the hour named for these meetings not a dozen persons were present at any of them. At St. Andrew's the audience consisted of six women and four men, and when the attendance had been increased to a score the meeting commenced. Addresses were given on "Unity of Religious Knowledge, Christian Endeavor Work, and Christ, the Ideal Teacher. Rev. Dr. Sims presided. An hour after the proceedings commenced in St. James' Church there were 63 persons, speakers included, present. Addresses were given on the Influence of College Life and the Importance of Discipline.
