LOVELL'S ADVANCED GEOGRAPHY

With 40 Coloured Maps and 150 Illustrations.

Critique from the "Canadian Monthly," for September.

Lovell's Advanced Geography, for the use of Schools and Colleges, 150 pp., 4to., with Maps and Illustrations. Montreal: John Lovell, 1880.

In the matter of Canadian treatises in Geographical science, we have at last emerged, not only into the clear light of day, but into the full noon-tide glare of a day in the latter part of the nineteenth century—with all the converging light which a score of sciences sheds upon it. In this branch of education, at all events, Canadian literature can now hold up its head and invite criticism with confidence as to the result. Thanks to the unwea-ried effort and the patriotic enterprise of that veteran publisher, Mr. Lovell, of Montreal, we have in this elegant Atlas-quarto a text book on geography which, it may be safely said, is far superior to any work in use in the schools of England, and is, at least, the equal of any text-book on the subject used in the United States. Indeed, among the latter—and we are familiar with most of them—we know of no book which is at the same time so full and accurate as this, nor is there any within our cognizance which, while giving such ample detail of American and British American geography, treats so fully of that of the
