

First steps were taken in the Department's modest oral history program when the Division made recordings of the reminiscences of two eminent Canadians, one a former senior officer of the Department who became a member of the International Court of Justice and the other a former Secretary of State for External Affairs.