

Mr. O'KEEFE: Would you abolish the pill?

Mr. KILGOUR: Perhaps I should say all the more noticeable, not worse. It is going to be a natural progression.

Mr. O'KEEFE: I am not asking this as a rhetorical question, sir, I am asking it in all seriousness. Would you abolish the pill?

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. O'Keefe, I am not sure if that question is in order.

Mr. O'KEEFE: If immigration is important for Canada, why do we abolish Canadians?

Mr. Chairman, I just have one final comment. I am sure Mr. Chatwood, as well as the Chairman, will be happy to hear that you people have no territorial ambitions in Newfoundland and Labrador. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN: I might point out that Mr. Chatwood is the member for Labrador, so he has some interest in the north.

Mr. CRAM: North or south Labrador?

The CHAIRMAN: All of it.

Mr. DELVILLANO: We will take it all, if you want.

The CHAIRMAN: Next on my list is Mr. Whelan.

Mr. WHELAN: I do not know if I come from one of the isolated areas or not but we do not call it part of the golden horseshoe. I also realize that Ontario has fresh water, polluted water and salt water. The economists tell us no matter what anyone wants to do or tries to do that the "grand trunk", or whatever you want to call it, probably within 10 years or so will be double the present population. The grand trunk is that area along the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. Your metropolitan area will probably extend through the area from Oshawa right straight through to Niagara Falls. It is maintained that it is natural that it is going to expand. Do you think the provincial government, or some government body, should legislate and tell industry where they should go?

Mr. KILGOUR: I think they realize the ills of that progression, and I think something should be done about it.

Mr. WHELAN: Yes, but you did not answer my question. Do you think that legislation should be passed to control where industry goes?

Mr. KILGOUR: Yes, I think they should meet this problem of pollution, and so on, and make it attractive to decentralize.

Mr. WHELAN: Do you think they should legislate where industry should go?

Mr. KILGOUR: I do not like compulsion in any form of legislation.

Mr. WHELAN: I am trying to point out that we cannot tell them where to go unless we have compulsory planning.

An hon. MEMBER: You can provide incentives, though.

Mr. KILGOUR: You can provide incentives. This is it exactly. We are suggesting that you provide incentives, and let them make up their minds whether they take advantage of that particular incentive or not. If through incentives you make decentralization more attractive than it is presently, why, they are going to take advantage of it.

Mr. WHELAN: We still have these terrific incentives in the designated areas but we are not getting industry away from the large metropolitan areas in the way we
