In unloading the steamer Westmount and her barge at Fort William of their cargoes of grain, officials of the Empire elevator are now engaged in an exciting race against time. As the Empire elevator is not provided with devices for unloading grain from boats, an improvised derrick, which has proved exceedingly erratic, has been rigged up for the Westmount. The wheat must be in the elevator before July 31, as delivery consists in being able to furnish warehouse receipts.

The rush of wheat to Fort William still continues and the C. P. R. shipping department are working at high pressure hurrying along the grain to the lake front.
