

NOT THE SAME AS IN PRE-WAR DAYS

The German Woman of Today, as Seen by Lady Norah Bentinck—Changes in Life of Potsdam.

Potsdam, as I beheld it a few days ago, is a mournful monument to the vanity of earthly greatness, writes Lady Norah Bentinck. Around the massive grey walls of Frederick the Great's new palace the grass and weeds grew deeply, and the famous broad walk, once used as a common thoroughfare by cyclists and pedestrians, inside the walls encountered a wilderness of memories.

In the tiny dome-shaped building ringed with trees rest the remains of the late German empress. The scarlet standards of her regiments droop over her coffin, and masses of dead and dying lily wreaths fill the place, so tragic and grim, with an atmosphere which contrasts strangely with the life of one whom the Germans honor.

A republican policeman, green-garbed, stands at the iron gate, and a slow, respectful stream passes continually, listless and very silent. Even the children cease their babblings as they are told to look upon "die Kaiserin."

Her memory is wonderfully fresh in people's hearts, especially in the women, and more than that of any other figure of the past her name is on the nation's lips. "She was so good, so noble, so thoughtful."

Strange to say the Kaiser's name is seldom mentioned. It seems to have lost all significance.

The crown princess holds a unique position, and nothing but admiration is heard of her. "The best woman in Germany," a first-class woman, are phrases of all classes and shades of political opinion.

She leads a quiet life, entirely given over to the care and education of her children, with whom she plays cricket and studies, makes their clothes, and is, in fact, their best friend.

The three superficial things which strike one most forcibly in the Berlin of today are (1) the entire absence of the Kaiser's mustache, many men being clean-shaven, the rest having tiny ones such as are seen in America; (2) the entire absence of uniforms; (3) the almost entire absence of the silk stockings, and this last I take as a very forcible sign of women's distress.

Their clothing, although neat and careful, is generally of cheap material, and suede gloves are practically never seen—most wearing either those made of silk or cotton or imitation suede, the home of which useful invention is Germany.

The German woman of today is a very different person from her prototype during the years prior to 1914. I could not help admiring the girls who, with no training of any kind except possibly of excellent in drawing rooms, have turned their hands to every kind of work. One with whom I came much in contact with was a charming specimen of this new German woman. She was pretty and only nineteen. By birth, education and sym-this, she belongs to the ancient regime.

Had there been no war she would be just launched into society, following its usual round of politics, dancing and gaiety, yet now she is a secretary who rises at 6 o'clock every day in order to be in her office in Berlin at 9 o'clock. Her one pleasure is a little sailing boat which she shares with a girl friend.

With a radiant smile this girl told me that she had never been so happy as now, because she feels she is being of some use in life, and when she had collected enough money she was going to buy a new dress and thus save her father having to do so for her. Her pay consists of 2,000 marks a month (less than $10 in our money) and for this pittance she works from nine till one and from two till five every day, and pays for her own food. There are no Saturday afternoon holidays in Germany, this alone adding four hours work to the German woman's week as compared to ours, and making their output at a rate of 6-240,000,000 hours a year greater than ours, allowing the number of their working population to be 80,000,000.

The German republic above all stands for freedom, and this desire is extremely noticeable all over the country. A certain rigidity has entirely disappeared and a goodnatured bon-homme prevails. Even the notices in public places are different. Instead of "Es ist streng verboten" (it is strictly forbidden) meeting the eye, one sees such words as "Mach' dich geboten" (people are begged). The people themselves laughingly acknowledge that they were too much of a "strong verboten" country before the war.

Government experts knew already that artificial illumination might be a part time substitute for daylight, but it is now shown that the electric lights may be employed to entirely take the place of the sun.

All the plants tested except cabbage bloomed, and no variety seems to require any special period of illumination to produce blooming.

PERSONAL NOTES ABOUT BAPTISTS

Rev. and Mrs. Alexander Torrie, who did such excellent service as evangelists at Victoria street, St. John, last spring, and later at George street, Fredericton, are to return to the maritime provinces for further service. Their first engagement this season is with the Baptist church, Truro, Rev. B. D. Knott, pastor.

Rev. J. Harry Puddington closed his pastorate with the churches at Melvern Square and Kingston on last Sunday, and will begin work as pastor at Caledonia and Kempt, Queens county, N. S., on next Sunday. Mr. Puddington had two years' fruitful service at Melvern Square and Kingston.

Rev. J. B. Ganong writes that he is pleasantly settled in the pastorate at Milton, Queen county, N. S., and finds the people exceedingly kind and thoughtful. It is gratifying to know that Mr. Ganong finds his strength equal to the demands of pastoral service again.

After forty-five years' service in the pastorate of our churches, Rev. Calvin Currie is obliged by advancing years to retire from work as pastor, but still feels equal to occasional supply preaching. He has removed from Newville street, N. B., and for some months his address will be 25 Columbia street, Houlton, Maine.

From the Middleton "Outlook" we learn that Rev. W. H. Newell, Ph.D., and family were tendered a very kind reception by the Middleton church and congregation when they were attended by a number of specially invited guests, prior to their leaving Middleton to take up residence in Wolfville. Dr. Hulse was presented with a highly complimentary address on behalf of the church and congregation. This was accompanied by the presentation of a purse of money. Mrs. Hulse and her daughter were also graciously remembered. Dr. Hulse and family are now residents in Wolfville, having bought the very home bungalow of Mrs. Whidden.

Dr. A. H. C. Morse has just completed ten years as pastor of the First church in Denver, Colorado, and on September 21 the church fittingly celebrated the anniversary of Dr. Morse's arrival (which chanced also to be his birthday), with a reception to him and his family. Addresses of appreciation were made by the governor, the mayor, by neighboring pastors, and by Dr. J. D. S. Riggs for the church; all this being accompanied with the presentation of a purse of gold. During the ten years of Dr. Morse's pastorate, the church has flourished as never before.

PLANTS FLOURISH WITHOUT SUNLIGHT

Artificial Lighting Found More Efficient Than Nature's Way.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 11.—Plants will flourish without daylight. Although ancient agricultural people worshipped the sun as the all-powerful source of life for the grain they raised, Dr. R. B. Harvey of the University of Minnesota has discovered that when artificial illumination is used to entirely supplant the sunlight, wheat, oats, barley, rye, potatoes, buckwheat, lettuce, beans, peas, clover, radishes, flax as well as weeds will grow, ripen and produce good quality seeds which will germinate.

A speeding up in the growth of the grain is a consequence of this method. Spring wheats were made to produce ripe seed in about ninety days of continuous lighting, and at this rate it is believed it will now be possible to grow three generations from a cross within one year. Plant breeders and agronomists will find this method of practical use, Dr. Harvey believes.

The energy used by the ordinary greenhouse in Minnesota in the winter time is sufficient to produce all the light and heat necessary for such experiments, it is stated. Almost all the energy of the light finally becomes heat and thus is made to serve a double purpose. Dr. Harvey's experiments were conducted in a specially constructed basement room and illumination for the experiment was obtained from tungsten filament lamps. The plants were kept in the room for twenty-four hours a day. One set of lamps was found to last long enough to produce an ordinary crop of the cereals.

Government experts knew already that artificial illumination might be a part time substitute for daylight, but it is now shown that the electric lights may be employed to entirely take the place of the sun.

All the plants tested except cabbage bloomed, and no variety seems to require any special period of illumination to produce blooming.

OLD ONE-CYLINDER CAR ON BROADWAY

Side-Winder Made the Trip from Detroit Under Own Power.

For the last week, the Detroit Cadillac Motor Car Corporation has been giving an antiquated one-cylinder automobile a place of honor in its show room at Broadway and Sixty-second street, New York.

The old car possesses many unique characteristics. It has a curved hood, a radiator, a chain drive, and motor amidships. It is built on the style of a horse-drawn phaeton and seats four passengers. The quaint oar and latch at the back by which the passengers enter caused much comment among those familiar with the luxurious tonneau of the modern automobile.

It came from the side. Although a score of years old, the motor possesses high compression. When cold, a strong arm is required to start it. The tank holds eight gallons of gas. This is sufficient for a long trip as the car makes about twenty-five miles to the gallon. Thirty-five miles an hour is obtained over smooth roads.

The ancient car recently finished a 73-mile trip from its birthplace, Detroit, every mile of the journey being made under its own power. The trip was an accompaniment of the celebration of the twenty-ninth birthday of the Detroit Cadillac Motor Car Corporation. It started from Detroit, stopping at the principal cities en route where its antiquity attracted crowds of automobile enthusiasts. The route taken by the elderly automobile led from Detroit through Toledo to Cleveland, Ohio.

From Erie, the Model A "Caddie" swung from the southern tier route, going through Jamestown, Olean, Elmira, Binghamton and Buffalo to Detroit. The route carried the old car over the Catskills, some of the grades calling for extraordinary climbing ability.

Ingels M. Uppedeu, president of the Detroit Cadillac Motor Car Corporation, piloted the ancient car as far as Erie, Pa. From there, it was taken to its destination by Lucien B. Burne of the New York organization.

GRAIN MOTHS IN WHEAT.

Farmers Urged by Jersey Expert to Use Much Care in Seeding

New York, Oct. 11.—Owing to the fact that there has been a great deal of grain moth in the 1922 crop, farmers are urged by the New Jersey State College of Agriculture to look over their wheat carefully to see if it is fit for seeding. In the fall of 1921, much of the seed wheat was infested with this moth, with the consequence that a poor stand was secured from some of the seed. It is only a moderate proportion of the grain have been infested, however, the grain is satisfactory for seed if it has been run through a fanning mill, but, in this case, it would be well to increase the rate of seeding in proportion to the amount of infestation.

lavra stage, makes holes in the grains, and when in the adult stage may be identified as a small moth frequently seen flying about the stock.

If a large proportion of the grains have been infested," says H. R. Cox, extension specialist in agronomy of the New Jersey Agricultural College, "it is best to get seed from some other source. If only a moderate proportion of the grains have been infested, however, the grain is satisfactory for seed if it has been run through a fanning mill, but, in this case, it would be well to increase the rate of seeding in proportion to the amount of infestation.

"This grain moth is often confused with the Hessian fly, an entirely different insect. The surest preventive against the Hessian fly is to seed after the fly-free date, which varies from Sept. 23 for Sussex county to Oct. 4 for Salem county. Seeding should take place as soon after the fly-free date as possible."
