A good deal of surprise is expressed at the result of the census in this city. I think there is no occasion for surprise. I have resided in the city some 25 years, and am personally acquainted with the enumerator in my district. He never called upon me to propound the questions required by law, and correct answers it was impossible for him to obtain from any other person living. Whether my name was enrolled or not I am unable to say:—the other information able to say:—the other information able to say:—the other information and content and the content of the census in this city.
