A PLAN THAT DIDN'T WORK.—Davis, who has recently made himself conspicuous by assisting to bring some Carleton widows to justice; for violating the liquor law, was seen prowling around Portland on election day with a view of capturing some of fenders in that line. Leaving a policeman outside he entered a shop on Main street where he found the proprietor and enquired for a glass of port wine. The proprietor knew the "decoy" and after telling him that he (Davis) knew well that he sold no liquor on that day, ordered him to
