They literally 'You plays that there 'armonium in worshipped their schoolmistress, and church beautiful, said Mr. Sowerbutts, would no more have thought of dis- at length. obeying her than of disputing the Miss Grayling laughed, and turned authority of the village constable.

When the rector visited the school every Monday morning, he was delighted with the order that reigned there. He thought Miss Grayling a very exemplary and superior young woman.

He lent her books. He gave her much advice as to her work, with which he a saint in glory! had not thought it worth while to trouble good Mrs. Piggin; and his counsels were invariably received with a Miss Grayling tranquilly. And now, charming deference.

It was the custom at Little Puddington for the curate to give the school children a lesson in Bible history on Wednesday afternoons; and Mr. Cope looked forward to his first lesson under Miss Grayling's ouspices with some in-ward trepidation. In spite of himself he felt a certain tremor as he addressed the new teacher, and yet he found himseif continually desiring to speak to her. By degrees, however, this wore off; and he came to look forward to Wednesday afternoons as pleasant interludes in his rather monotonou weeks. He, too, was solicitous for the new teacher's mental pabulum, and lent her books, beginning with popular history-books, going on to Sunday afternoon tales, and finally reaching the stage of undeniable yellow-backed novels. Miss Grayling smiled to herself as she placed Mr. Cope's "Orley Farm" in her desk beside Mr. Dow thwaite's "Chronicles of the Schonberg

But everybody liked Miss Grayling The children's mothers looked on her as a superior being. Even cross old Miss Sowerbutts, at the Mount Farm, liked to have go over on a Thursday after noon, when John was at market, drink a cup of tea with her, and enlighten her as to the real fashions, as worn in London. The only person who did not join in the chorus of approbation was Miss Jordan, the rector's sister-in-law.

"Don't you think we were very fortunate in getting such a superior mis tress in Mrs. Piggin's place?' said the rector to his sister-in-law, one Sunday

"I dare say," said Miss Jordan. "There is a marked improvement in the behavior of the children, both at church and in school," continued the rector, in rather a magisterial way, as if to resent the impeachment of an un-due partiality for Miss Grayling, which was visible in Miss Jordan's face. "The boys don't make half so much MOLASSES noise in going out of church before the sermon as they used to do,' continued the parson. 'I've no doubt the young woman is very well fitted for her place,' said Miss

'Dear me!' said the rector to himself 'it's odd how few women can forgive another woman in somewhat lower rank of life, for having a pretty face and an attractive manner!' Whatever the

was not captivated by the new mistress. They avoided each other, as if by mutual consent. It happened that one afternoon, in early summer, Miss Grayling had gone up to the Mount Farm, by invitation, to drink tea with Mies Sowerbutts. It was a Thursday- a day when the farmer always attended market in the neighboring town of Greby. T must make haste and get home be fore dark,' said Miss Grayling, as the day began to close; aud she went up to put on her bonnet. The operation however, took some little time, as it was diversified by an exhibition of Miss Sowerbutt's mother's wedding dress, and various other piaces of raiment of a quite remote antiquity, in all of which Miss Grayling took keen inter-

'I declare it's getting quite dark,' exclaimed the school mistress at last, as she threw on her hat in a great hurry, and went down stairs with her hostess. Arrived in the garden, however, it was impossible to go without a morsel of Miss Sowerbutt's delicious sweet-briar, the peas, too, were in a most interesting state of developement; and by the time they had been duly admired, the farmer's burly form was seen slowly advancing between the hedge-rows, borne onwards by his gig and his good mare,

Certainly Miss Grayling looked a pretty figure as she stood at the porch of the farmhouse, shaking hands with its mistres. 'Well, miss, and how are ye?' said Mr. Sowerbutts, with a very red face, as he leant out of the gig to shake hands with his sister's visitor. 'Very well, thank you. But I must say good-evening. I really must get home before dark.'

'What's the need for that? Jess and I mun see thee home.' 'Oh, no no! I couldn't think of such a thing. You must be so tired, and the poor horse, too. Gooo-bye.' And Miss Grayling took a hasty farewell of her friend, and ran down the roadway with the prettiest little steps in the world. Meanwhile Mr. Sowerbutts was slowly turning round the unwilling Jess. But, John, the mare will be overdone. She can find her way home. Or I'll send Jacob with her,' said Mrs. Sowerbutts, regretting in her heart that she had ever invited the schoolmistress to the farm.

To this John made no reply, and having succeeded in turning the horse ing and gig, he speedily overtook Miss Grayling, who was walking on ahead in

'Whoa! who-a!' cried Mr. Sowerbutts to the mare. 'Now,' miss, will'ee get in?' And he held back the apron as he spoke. 'Really I can't-I can't take you back to Puddington after your jour- HARD COAL. ney;' and Miss Grayling stood hesitating. 'No,' she said more firmly, as Mr.

'Beautiful!' responded Mr. Sower-

'Ob. Mr. Sowerbutts! you really shouldn't be so complimentary,' said tell me how things went at market to-

The conversation thus took a more prosaic turn; and Miss Grayling evinced the deepest interest in the price of hay and calves, and other agriculture topics, until they reached the cottage (To be Continued)
