$1,000 For Breach of Promise.

One thousand dollars damages was the amount set by the jury at Tuesday's session of last week, of the Fall Assizes at Stratford in a case of Mrs. Mary Maher, of Shelburne, vs. Andrew Dale, now of Paisley, for breach of promise of marriage. The defendant it is alleged, proposed to and was accepted by the plaintiff about 1903, and afterwards left for the South-western States to work, and in 1909 was married to another lady. Letters were produced by the plaintiff's solicitor, Mr. George Bray, of Listowel, which proved that there was an understanding between the two parties with regard to marriage. The defendant's excuse for delaying the marriage was that he would sooner wait until he had a sufficient income for them to live on in a manner and with every comfort such as she shared before marriage. There was no defence in this case. The jury then retired and returned with the above verdict.

The Dangers of Gasoline.

People do not seem to realize the danger in handling gasoline, as is evidenced by the loss of life and property each year and the serious burns to many who do not lose their lives. The instance is recorded of a Chicago woman, who, wishing to have a quick fire, poured gasoline on the fuel in the stove. Then she struck a match and started the fire. Like a flash the gasoline in the can exploded and she was fatally burned. She evidently did not know that gasoline has to be handled more carefully than gunpowder, and that an unseen train of gasoline might lead straight from the lighted match to the comparatively distant can.

Another case reported is that of a woman who poured a quart of gasoline in a marble basin in the toilet room and placed a silk waist in it. She closed the door and after ten minutes absence returned and rubbed the silk between her hands. This generated sufficient electricity to make a spark, causing the gasoline to explode. The house was burned and the woman lost her life.

Editor Gazette—

I am pleased to see the matter of better roads being taken up through your paper. It certainly is time, as some of our roads are in a disgraceful condition. We should have first class roads in Carrick, as we have an abundance of good gravel—but with some pathmasters the idea seems to be to get in their time, whether their road beat is improved or not. To my mind it is a useless waste of time and work to keep constantly hauling on gravel—use the grader more and give proper drainage to the water, which now lies in great pools on the road bed. We have gravel enough on our roads now to last for years. Have a man go over each beat twice in the summer with a pick and rake, and the result will be roads that will be a pleasure to drive on. It is time our council wake up and take this matter in hand, and if they have not backbone enough to carry it thru, the people will find men who will do this necessary work. Other townships are taking this matter up with good results. Why should Carrick, with all its advantages lag behind?

A Gruesome Joke.

Mr. John Coumans, a former proprietor of the Walker House here, now a merchant prince in Chepstow, is reported to have had some real estate thrown back on his hands because of a gruesome joke which some wags of Chepstow played on a recent purchaser of the property. A house, it seems, which Mr. Coumans had bought for speculative purposes, was afterwards moved by him onto the site of an old cemetery, and while resting on the graves of some old pioneers, it caught the fancy of an intending purchaser and a bargain was struck whereby it was to change hands. The prospective owner, it seems, started in to fix it up as a domicile for himself, and as a preliminary commenced to excavate for a cellar. It was then the wags got in their work, and securing some old sheep bones, planted them where the diggers could not miss them with a spade. And miss them they didn't, for the shovels hadn't been working long after the event, when the gruesome find was made. Thinking that the remains of an old settler had been unearthed and not caring to have his ghost pursuing him through life, the prospective buyer called the workmen off the job and rescinded the deal. Not after the truth of the situation had been made clear, could the confidence of the man, it seems, be restored again sufficient to renew the deal.—Times.

Theft In Hanover.

Several merchants in the east end of the town have missed articles from their stores from time to time. They stayed in their stores until the small hours of the morning, for several nights but nothing dropped, until Friday night when in the second flat of the stationary store of John Taylor, town clerk, there was a commotion. Mr. Taylor saw a boy crawl through the skylight and sang out, "Hands up." The youth who carried a knife in one hand, turned around and faced a levelled revolver in the hands of Mr. Taylor. The boy was James Wall. A scurry of footsteps on the roof evidenced the fact that Wall was not alone, and he subsequently confessed that "Skin" Eby was with him. After Mr. Taylor had walked the culprit down to County Constable Martin's, Town Coustable Beamish was aroused from bed and sent after Eby who was in bed by this time. Both boys owned up to the burglary business, but averred that it was the "booze that did it." Wall is not 21 years of age while Eby is on the prohibited list in the town. The magistrate reserved decision on the liquor aspect of the case and Wall and Eby were taken to Owen Sound yesterday. They elected to be tried by the judge.

Suing The Township.

Dr. Hall has entered an action in the Division Court here to recover $99.75 from the township of Brant, which he claims is the balance due him for attending certain small-pox cases in the township during his tenure of office as Medical Health Officer for Brant. The township, it seems, could have settled with the doctor for a much smaller amount some time ago, but kept deferring payment from time to time until the patience of the Walkerton physician played out, and an action to recover the larger amount, with costs, has been launched. The matter will come on trial at the next sitting of the Division Court here on Saturday, Nov. 4th.—Bruce Times.

The seventeen-month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Petch of Palmerston met sudden death on Tuesday. The little fellow while toddling around the house, his mother being absent from the room for a moment, fell into a pail of hot water, which was being used for scrubbing. Though not hot enough to scald him severely the shock resulted fatally.

Disquieting Thought.

The winter's at the door; full soon I'll hear him roar, and where's the roll to get my coal and buy of grub a store? Oh, where's the clanking cash to keep the kids and hash and shoddy clothes and furbelows and shoes and other trash? The money—where's it at, to buy my frau a hat, and hay and chow to feed the cow and sounbones for the cat? I spent too much, I ween, for wholesome gasoline; I blew my wad to go abroad and see the King and Queen. I journeyed here and there threw my money in the air; and now I'm broke, my hat's in soak and I am in despair. I see a million chumps like me, in doleful dumps, the while I gaze on bygone days and work the briny pumps. Like me they blew their bucks among the drakes and ducks and have no roll to buy the coal—and life's all nips and tucks, when this dread winter flies you'll see me passing wise; in summer time I'll salt the dime for winter's beef and pies. Walt Mason.

A Progressive Farmer.

S. H. Colbeck of Monticello, is a real evidence of the progressive farmer, who believes that the things of yesterday will not suffice for the present. The day of tallow candle has been succeeded by the use of coal-oil, and now this is giving way to electric light. Time is not so very far remote that a bubbling spring on a farm, if even enclosed by a few logs was a prize, and when the owner got a wooden pump on the shallow well it was an evidence of real progress. This, too, had to give way to the drilled wells operated by windmills, which force the water to the house, to the barn and to the pasture field. But this is essentially a day of progress and Mr. Colbeck decided to have some of the advantages of city life along with the blessing of the farm. He is installing an air-pressure water service in his premises, the power being furnished by a gasoline engine, which also drives a dynamo, the electricity being stored in batteries, and used to light the house and barns. The plant is not too large, too expensive, nor too complicated for the ordinary farmer to have. The pump on a drilled well is operated by the engine, forcing the water into a steel tank holding about 500 gallons. When the air retaining in the tank shows a pressure of about 50 pounds the engine is stopped and the water runs from any tap in the same way as where they have a waterworks system. The plant gives plenty of water at all times for every need on the farm, reduces the fire danger in the building, provides for lavatory and bathroom purposes, and saves endless steps for the house-wife. Sure the world is moving, when the farmer 12 miles from town reads by electric light generated on the place, and has the modern conveniences in his home that go so far to make life worth living.—Grand Valley Star.
