Written for the Acadian The Coming of the Tide.

A lonely nook by the ocean's above, Earren sed drear and still, Listed the wind an I the ocean's roar, And caught the dust which the wild wind Down from some distant hill.

Sad and lone with its grasses sere, Laid low neath the summer sky, Its music sweet braks the silence drear, Its tender twigs moved in rustling cheet As the wild west wind went by.

The tide far out came creeping slow
Upon the sandy beach;
Its tones had a whisper soft and low,
And told of old ocean's ebb and flow,
In their sounding, surging speech.

Far upon the sands and rocks it swept,
And entered the dreary cave,
Along whise margin the grasses kept
Their silent watch for the tide that crep
To them in gentle wave,

They lifted their heads at its coming sweet And glowed in their sunmer green, And rustled soft in the breezes fleet, That cooled the glow of the noontide head And sang o'er ocean's sheen.

The clouds flittered out of the summer sk The clouds fittered out of the same And left it blue and clear;
The breeze kept time to the song of the sea,
The little birds tuned their minstrelsy
In notes of joyous cheer.

Is it not so in our daily-life?
When the tide ebbs out from the shore And we hear but the waves in their source of strife,
The dreary wind is with sadness rife,
And gladness seems no more.

Life is so barren and sad and coll,
We think of the sun-lit past,
Call to remembrance the days of old,
When every cloud had its tinge of gold,
And the days seemed too sweet to las

INTENSE SUFFERING!

Mr. William Buchanan, 24 years engineer in the Cunard amship Company's service, 8 St. John's Road, Kirkdale, rerpool, Eng., writes: "I suffered two years of agony from an ection in the head which six physicians pronounced incurable. They were divided in opinion as to whether it was acute neuralgia of the head or rheumatic affection of the brain, but all agreed that I could never recover. In my paroxysms of pain it needed two and sometimes three men to hold me down in bed. When at death's door,
