THE AUTUMN SACRIFICE.

Bull bunt the grass above the fields;
Bull blushed the trees bold the leaves,
As it swarms with visus that dropped
Their crimson blossoms 'mid the leaves.

And over trees, and over grain,
Each hooded stalk a shaft of flame,
Still bent that soft, sweet-scented sky,
To white white clouds we徒 God's name.

Beneath that quiet sky, the sea
Had stilled its end and staved out.
We seemed to hear the "Pete," he still,
A few glances of the sun that dropped.

My sacrifice; and every tree,
I thoughts with sprinkled blood-red was;
These fields of grain, one mass of flame
By sacrifice! stars fed.

Yet, Isaac-like, I saw the sun
To claim the heart's submitted all.
Twas in the stillness of my soul
I heard the Mount Moriah call.

Strange scene, to feel that day by day
The soul accords some silver stains;—
Strange strength, to know and yet pass on.
Our only son our trusting prayes.

Oh, Peace that sweetly followed pain!
O, Christ, that blessed that offered all!
For I the benediction heard,
Who heard the mountain's altar-call.

I little thought, that day by day,
My soul had climed a Papha's side;
I caught the flash of golden gates
Across a wavy Jordan tide.

Why will we weep and moan about
When sky clouds above are own?
Blow not the flowers after rain,
We're not the earth its summer green?

How often have a cross
Whose heavy frame we scarcely bore,
When passed beneath and lifted up,
To be the frame of heaven's door!

Tricentenary of the Scottish Reformation

The proceedings connected with the celebration of the Tricentenary of the Reformation were opened on Tuesday, by a sermon delivered in the Free Church Assembly Hall. The preacher was the Rev Dr Guthrie.

Long prior to the hour announced for the commencement of public worship, crowds were collected at the various entrances to the hall, the body of which was unusually crowded for members. By twelve o'clock all the galleries were filled in the best manner possible.

In the lower part of the hall, however, a number of people were gathered in the best manner possible.

After the sermon had been delivered, the overflow was accommodated in the best manner possible.
