Many of these notices were issued to bring about reductions in wages. Hundreds of famiwork-houses are full to overflowing. Charitable societies are hard at work, and collecting boxes have been placed in many places of business and public resort. North Wales slate quarrymen's Union has offered the same premiums to members who will emigrate to America or Australia as those offered by the North

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A series of inquiries made to-day in London at the agencies of the principal manufacturing companies in the north of England respecting the sad acants of distress prevailing there among work people resulted in confirmworst reports that have received. Journals from these districts and telegraph reports all tell the same story. Not even in the time of the great cotton famine in Lancashire, caused by the war in America, has there been so widespread and acute dis-tress. For a long time manufacturers have been carrying on their business at an actual loss, hoping for a turn in the tide, and keeping a certain portion of their people employed, but their men have not been kept as a general not been kept as a general rule on full time, and wages were gradually reduced, and from time to time the men were compelled to draw on their reserve daily expenses. The climax has now come. The employers find they can go on no longer without a very severe reduction in wages, and many of them can not go on at There are strikes on one hand and lock-outs on another, and meanwhile not only privation and distress, but absolute starvation is staring the workmen in the face. Some of them have been pro-reserve resources whatever. The subject of organizing a national system of relief for the suffering operatives is now in agitation, and it is likely it will be carried out on an spent the winter time in refreshing them-selves and gathering strength for the sum-mer, hence winter was their friend and ally. Dean Stanley, who visited Niagara a few months ago, said of the sight that then presented itself:—"In that memorable hour—memorable in the life of every one as the Egypt or the Alps of Switzerland—when I first stood before the esteract of Niagara, it seemed to me that the scene I witnessed was not an unapt likeness of the fortunes of America. It was midnight; the meon which spans the river the ceaseless contor tion, confusion, whirl and chaos which burst forth in clouds of foam from that entral chasm which divided the American from the British dominions; and as I looked on the ever-changing movement, and listened to that everlasting roar, it seemed an emblem of the fermenting, perplexing, bewildering activity, the cease bewindering activity, the ceaseless, rest-less, beating whirlpool of existence in the United States. But into the moonlight sky there rose a cloud of spray twice as nigh as the falls themselves—silent, majes tic, immovable. That silver column, glittering in the moonlight, seemed an image of the future of American history—of the upward, heaven-aspiring destiny which should emerge from the distractions of the present." To-night this silver column rises perhaps like the Pillar of the Cloud far into the heavens, its head high up in the azure, and its base resting on ice mountains and valleys of ice, huge crevasses and gorges through which the imprisoned water has forced itself. Beneath lie the evidences of A TITANIC BATTLE. Boulders of stone and masses of ice, fir trees torn from the shore, and huge rocks that seemingly have been upheaved during the contest, from the lower depths, stand in confusion and chaos, monuments of the intensity of the struggle between the elements. The curling eddies of the stream, the violence and power of its foaming water its temperatures reversed leavier. waters, its tempestuous waves and leaping crests, hurrying on their course, over-whelming in their fury everything which dares to give resistance—the river is one which inspires awe in the breast of the onlooker, and causes him to shrink and wonder at the helplessness and insignificance of man. The bright sea green waters dashing to an apparently im-measurable depth over the precipice at the Falls, and breaking into spray on the rocky bed below, the heavy foam dancing away on the heaving and convulsed current to the accompaniment of the roar of the cata-act, are sufficient to make the most unimaginative pause and cause them to realize how grand and complete is this most wonderful work of Nature. Now, when the ice-king has grasped in his freezing clutch the waves and the spray, and has spread out his won-ders on rock and tree and branch until their dazzling beauties almost confound the wayfarer with their variety and brilliance, is the time for lovers of the artistic to view the mighty grandeur of the scene. From the whirlpool to the falls the face of the rock on either side of the river is hung with VARIEGATED ICY STREAMERS of blue and yellow and white, according to the colouring which the exudations of the rocks impart. Long arms of forbidding icicles reach down over the cold stoney surfaces and dip their chilly fingers in the tide as though the snow banks on the tops of the cliff were holding out a hand of welcome to the masses of ice which float idly by. From Clifton up to the Falls the rocks on either side are aced with glistening ice which has formed from continual drippings from the banks, and looks like columns of shining metal.

Just below the bridge which stretches across the chasm at Clifton AN ICE BRIDGE has formed and passengers pass safely across from the Canadian to the American shore. To reach the bridge it is necessary to decend the bank by a sloping road which is covered with snow and ice—and very fatiguing the process is. The ice on the river at this point is thick and strong, beinver at this point is thick and strong, being wedged together by frequent slides. Indeed so long as the lower end holds, the pressure of the current on the upper part will keep the ice compact and give firm walking. Looking from the bank near the bridge the people crossing look like pigmies pursuing a toilsome course among

On their part Ministers have in some cases expressed gratification at the good sense and moderation of the deput of the deputations, and surprise at the great industry and skill with which the whole question of Protection had been worked up. Whatever may be the result of these discussions, it is certain that now for the first time in the history of the country this business men and the Government have result of these discussions, it is certain that now for the first time in the history of the country the business men and the Government have met on ground which ean be occupted without conflict by by both. It would be a very unlikely circumstance if the propositions as formulated by the deputation should be accepted in their integrity by the Government, but the gentlemen who formed the deputations where assured that their representations have not fallen on deaf ears, and that the Minister of Finance has a mind capable of seeing their side of the question. Some of the deputation express a belief that if the the deputation express a belief that if the Government accept their propositions in the main, the country will be revolutionized in the direction of prosperity. Mr. Fraser, of the Manufacturers' Association, will remain in Ottawa for some time, in wampum hanging from it signifying the which should always show us the way to that charge of our rights. Father, as the certainly believe that the Great Spirit was certainly believe that the Great Spirit was the control of the contr and approved the contract made between you children's ancestors and the representatives of the British Crown, and as firmly do we believe that the same Almighty and Benevolent Being witnesses, but does no approve of, the manner in which the latter power has fulfilled its part of the engagement. Your children still possess the silver chain and wampun belt. They see the same sun rise an iset. They observe the rivers flow on in their course, and the grass continue to grow as of old. They also know that the British Empire is still in existence, and they sincerely pray that it may long be permitted by Divine Providence to maintain its exaked position among the nations of the world, and that the illustrious head and governors thereof at home and abroad may enjoy every blessing. But they are nevertheless painfully sensible that their presents of clothing have for some time been stopped, and no equivalent has been grauted them: that while other indian stress enjoy a handoome anouity, pult to them in money, your children, if they could not have the sense of the covenant, and so freely did'you shed our blood in the cause we embraced, that many, very many of our best warriors perished. Nor was it in the revolutionary war alone that we showed our fidelity During the war of 1812, 1813 and 1814 your children were actively engaged under Generals Proctor, Drummond and Brock at Detroit Moraviantown, Niagara, Queenston, Oswego Chippewa, Black Rock an I Fort George, in which actions they suffered severely, and at the close of the seytown and Moraviantown and make future provision for their families. The rebellion of 1837 and 1835 talso witnessed your children in arms and ready to support the cause of their Queen. Father, your children is possed to the post of the post o Government are by no means likely to be dissipated and diverted, in view of the approaching meeting of Parliament, from the one thing necessary, a National Policy. The rumours about reciprocity may therefore be allowed to subside. The time for such negotiations has been indefinitely postponed by the general voice of the country. We have tried negotiations without success. Now we will try legislation. office to-day in the Privy Council chamber in the presence of the Cabinet. Judge Gwynne was not sworn in. Judge Tasche-reau was, however. The Court opened to-day, with many important cases to decide. It is not at all unlikely that the departmental officials who were so shabbily treated by the late Government may rush. to reopen the case of their claims to com-pensation, though their intention was not pensation, though their intention was not known when mention was made of their case in a former issue. Your correspondent is in a peculiarly good position to know that the labours of more than one official, extending over the whole field of operations in regard to the Treaty of Washington and the fisheries question, deserve the the sate reward that the public could was to support the cause of their Queen. Father, your childrent arms and ready to support the cause of their Queen. Father, your childrent rehave every hope that your accustomed regard for them will not fail, and that your kindness in reference to what they deem a just request will be immediately available. And renewing our aftestation of loyalty, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

HALIFAX, Jan. 20.—There has been some disagreement between the trustees of the school-house at Cariboo gold mines and a number of the young people of that community. The young people wanted the school-house to practise dancing in, to which the trustees objected. It was thought the matter rested there, but about nine o'clock on the 16th instant a keg of powder was placed in the room and the school-house blown up.
