London, Nov. 25.—If the authorities at Scotland Yard look with a favourable eye on a cunning little invention which is at present engaging their attention, every policeman in London may be transformed into a human wireless telegraph station before long.

Mr. C. E. Kelway, the electrical engineer who has invented this clever apparatus for the benefit of nervous people explained exactly how it works.

It is operated on the Hertzian wave principle, and the cost of fitting it up should be a very light one.

indeed. The householder buys his transmitter, which he can have conveniently placed by his bedside, and the government is only mulcted in a very moderate outlay, in the fitting out of the police force with the tiny receivers which are to be used. When the connection is made by the Hertzian wave, the receiver starts a musical little jingle, which puts the nearest constable on the qui vive, and all he has to do then is to parade his beat and locate the electric signal, which lights up simultaneously with the signal, and shows him at which house his services are required.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Several years ago, when I, a very young newspaper woman, was precariously subsisting on the pittance of a 11 y small stipend that my first paper deigned to consider me worth a young newspaper man on the same paper came to me, and, with great embarrassment, blurted out that he was in a terrible mess financially. "and could I—he hated like thunder to ask it, but he simply didn't know where to turn, and he knew how kind-hearted I was—could I lend him five dollars just until the next pay day?"

Now, for several weeks I had been saving every penny that didn't have to go towards my actual living expenses for a suit—the first thing of the sort I was to buy with my own earnings. I had the suit all picked out. It was a dark blue serge and it was to cost fifteen dollars, and I had nine dollars saved towards it. The money was in my top bureau drawer, under my handkerchiefs. Now I knew that I couldn't possibly save the other six for two or three weeks and I didn't see any reason why I should not let the poor man have five dollars of it, instead of keeping it in that bureau drawer. So I assured him of my great delight at being able to help a brother cub in time of trouble, and gave him the money.

He didn't pay it back the next pay day.

Nor for very many pay days thereafter.

You can imagine my anguish of spirit when the purchase of that beloved and much-needed suit—I wish you could see the funny little coat I was wearing—was delayed. But being a little fool, even that anguish wasn't powerful enough to make me go to the man and ask for the money.

Finally, several months afterwards, he came and told me his father wanted him to leave the newspaper business. He said his family was wealthy, but he had been on the outs with them, and that they were going to get him a place in the diplomatic service. He paid me four of that five dollars.

I never saw the other dollar. I have never seen him twice since, but he never spoke of it.

Perhaps you think this is a queer story to publish, but I'll explain to you how I came to tell it.

I had always thought, until recently, that my experience was a unique one, and that man was set apart by his absolute lack of sense of honor from the rest of the world of men.

But within the last year, there have come to my ears a half dozen stories of men who have borrowed from women and never paid back the loan.

One young lady was visiting at the home of friends of her family. The son of the house, who entertained her most royally, professed a temporary financial embarrassment, owing to a delayed check, and borrowed seventy-five cents of her "just for the day."

He never paid it back or even spoke of the loan.

Now I am not one of those people who thinks it the unpardonable sin for a man to borrow money from a woman.

But for the man who borrows money from a woman, and then betrays her unwillingness to refer to the subject, I'm not paying back the loan—well, my dictionary hasn't words to fit him.

And, as for the girl who loans money to a man, I'd like to say two things to her.

First, if it is a large sum, she should take a note. That isn't a sign of suspicion merely of common sense.

And, second, if he fails to pay it back within a reasonable time, I think she should ask him for it, and if that does no good, I think it is her absolute duty, for the safety of other women, to pillory him by telling what he has done.

Honored by Women

When a woman speaks of her silent secret suffering she trusts you. Millions have bestowed this mark of confidence on Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. Everywhere there are women who bear witness to the wonderful, curing-power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—which saves the suffering sex from pain, and successfully grapples with women's weaknesses and stubborn ills.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG IT MAKES SICK WOMEN WELL.

No woman's appeal was ever misdirected or her confidence misplaced when she wrote for advice, to the WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets infuse mild natural bowel movement once a day.

Household Notes.

To use up coal dust pile it carefully on a piece of paper and lay it on the fire. In this way it can be burned without smothering the fire.

Ink stains on handkerchiefs, etc., may be soaked out in milk, but the sooner they are dealt with the more easily will they be removed.

The best way to peel onions is to hold them under water during the operation. Then cut up a raw potato to remove the odor from the hands.

A pinch of soda added to the boiling water in which cabbage or cauliflower is cooked improves the flavor and prevents much of the offensive odor.

A clean fire for grilling purposes can be obtained by sprinkling over it a little powdered nitre. This is used by all first-class chefs and grill cooks.

A tablespoonful of olive oil, taken after the evening meal is a great fatener. A dash of sherry wine makes it much easier to swallow and retain.

A glass of jelly left open is very apt to sour. Left-over jelly, however small the amount, should be at once used in tarts or added to a fruit pudding of any kind.

A handy kitchen device is a double flour sifter which makes it possible to sift the flour twice with no more effort than would be expended in sifting it once.

A tasty way of using left-over boiled rice is to put a piece of butter in the frying pan and adding the rice when the butter sizzles. Fry until brown.

What Royal Trips Cost

Fips and Presents that Run into Thousands.

South Africa is agog with excitement over the visit of the Duke of Connaught to inaugurate the Union. Already a considerable sum of money has been spent in anticipation—cleaning up buildings, remaking roads, and building a special Royal train—that will cost a thousand or two. Taking all these odd items into consideration an extended Royal tour cannot cost short of a million, although it is impossible to obtain exact figures of these incidental expenses, which of course run into more money than the actual cost of travelling.

KING GEORGE'S TRIPS.

Although King George has travelled more extensively than any other Royal personage, his bills have not run into a very large amount. Thus, the Ophir trip to Australia was estimated at £160,000, which is not a large sum, taking everything into consideration—the chartering of a special steamer for so long a time, the expense of a naval escort, and travelling charges. His little jaunt to Canada a year or two ago was done for

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its forms can be cured. It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden."

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at the modest figure of £2,000; but the tour in India in 1905 cost a large sum, although the exact total has never been published, as a good deal of the expenditure came out of the Royal purse. Parliament voted £20,000, while the cost of altering the Renown was borne by the Naval Estimates, and most of the ceremonial charges by India. The total probably came to about a quarter of a million pounds.

DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, Theatre Hill. Small size, 25 cents; postage 5c. extra; large size, 50 cents; postage 10c. extra. Mail orders must be accompanied by remittance.— Oct 29, 10.

This was not so much as that incurred by King Edward's visit to India as Prince of Wales in 1875. This tour was arranged by Sir Bartle Frere, who was kept busy for seven months making all the arrangements. Parliament voted £60,000 for the general expenses, which Sir Bartle said was quite inadequate, as the presents to native princes amounted to nearly that sum, and he asked for £100,000. This was not forthcoming, so he made the best of matters by going to Lord Northbrook, the Viceroy, who induced the Indian Treasury to grant another £10,000 to the presents fund.

Half a Million in Gifts.

People in England thought that the £60,000, together with the £52,000 which came out of the Naval Estimates, was too much, and there was actually a meeting of protest in Hyde Park. Even Mr. Fawcett protested in the House of Commons, but public opinion became reconciled when it was seen that the Prince was not merely having a holiday at the country's expense. Presents to native princes ate up the nice little sum of £40,000, which was really very small when we consider it was generally estimated that he received gifts worth pretty well £500,000, one Maharajah offering him a jewelled sword worth £12,000, while English shopkeepers and manufacturers netted some £250,000 out of the presents sent from England. The total cost of the trip was considerably over £300,000.

£35,000 for an Hour's Visit.

Everyone remembers the spectacular trip of the Kaiser to the Holy Land some ten or twelve years ago. As Messrs. Cook arranged that tour, the exact cost has not been made public, although it is reported to have amounted to no more than £5,000. But the Kaiser can be lavish when he likes, and his visit to Hohenzollern a year ago cost £35,000, although he was only there for one hour.

Royal visits to foreign countries are usually borne by the King's own Privy Purse, although if he is engaged in national business he may receive a grant in aid. For instance, when King Edward and Queen Alexandra went to Scandinavia, Parliament voted £3,068. Queen Victoria's last trip to the Continent cost £4,383, exclusive of £1,300 incurred by the Master of the Horse.

Six British battleships of the "Royal Sovereign" class, launched between 1891 and 1892 and having a displacement of 14,150 tons, have been stricken from the navy list and will be sold. These battleships were included in Naval Defence Act of 1889 and comprise at present the fourth division of the Home Fleet. The battleships condemned are the "Royal Sovereign," "Repulse," "Ramillies," "Resolution," "Royal Oak" and "Empress of India." The latter is the "hoodoo" ship that rammed and sank the "Victoria." It is to be noted that these ships are the last ones that mounted 13.5 in. guns before the adoption of the 12 in. weapon and they are being thrown on the scrap heap just as the 13.5 in. gun is reintroduced in the British navy.
