Danger in India.

BOMBAY, Sept. 8 .- Lord Harris, Governor of Bombay, attended a public meeting last night and made a weighty speech in regard to the situation of affairs in the presidency. He said the Government had become possessed of information which tended to show that the recent riots here tended to show that the recent_riots here and other places were partly due to political intrigues. Agents of the Government were investigating this charge, and if their inquiries proved it to be well founded, the secret intriguers would have to answer for the lives lost in the recent religious riots. Four thousand pamphlets of an incendiary character were recently selzed in Bombay.

Four thousand pamphlets of an incendiary character were recently seized in Bombay. The Pioneer, of Alahabad, an influential paper, says that the leaders of the agitators are spreading broadcast literature urging the natives to rise against their enemies, who have so long abused them. These pamphlets are having marked effect upon the ignorant Hindoos, and as they have been circulated in most of the provinces of India, the danger of a widespread rising cannot be over-estimated. It warns the Government, unless every precaution is taken at once to prevent the spread of the agitation, which can be done only by the seizure of the leaders, the country will suddenly witness a convulsion, in comparison

In the meantime Baron Halsbury, Baron Herschel, Baron Monkswell and the Bishop of Ripon had spoken to half empty benches. After 9 o'clock the scene outside and inside the House livened up as members and visitors began streaming in. The peeresses, strangers' and diplomatic galleries showed few vacant seats. Conspicuously occupying a portion of the area of the House were 22 bishops attired in their capacious robes with lawn sleeves. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Oxford and every notable church dignitary were present. Members of the House of Commons crowded the accesses and standing room around the throne.

The debate in the House reached the accessed dullness in the Earl of Morley's maundering against the bill. A number of other peers were on the roll to speak, but a sense of weariness affected them as well as the House garants the bill. rose at 10:30 o'clock amid rapturous cheers and began his speech. He said he felt that there was some satisfaction in occupying the position he occupied as that of the last person to speak against home rule in the course of the present session. But although it was a position of much distinction it had many inconveniences. In particular the ground of debate had been so fully occupied that there was little new left for him to say. Throughout the debate the question constantly present in his mind was why had the Government introduced such a bill? On this point the was why had the Government intro-duced such a bill? On this point the denly witness a convulsion, in comparison with which the serious riots at Bombay, Rangeon and Azimgurn will sink into Instruction in the significance. There is yet time, the paper says, to check the growing danger, but immediate action is imperative.

Fierce Rioting by Miners.

had hated England. Lord Salisbury reminded the House of the opinion the country held before this terrible change occurred when the Liberal party was solely in the hands of deserters. Then, he said, however much they might have disagreed on local and internal questions, he felt sure that on all imperial questions their hearts had beaten true to the empire, as had the hearts of the Conservatives. Meaculay, when he sat with the Conservatives—(laughter)—had said that they would regard the repeal of the union as fatal to the empire, and would never consent to it. If England had told their lordships that she wanted this horror the case might have been different, but he believed that to be impossible. As long as England wastraetoherself she would never allow this atroclous, this mean, this treacherous revolution. Their lordships would be untrue to the duty devolved upon them from a splendid ancestry and untrue to their highest traditions if they failed to reject the bill.
