RAILWAY ENTERTAINED THE CANADIAN TICKET AGENTS IN CHICAGO.

As a farewell feature of the reception tendered to the members of the Canadian Ticket Agents' Association, and their wives, who attended their convention October 6, 7 and 8, the Chicago and Northwestern Railway entertained them in the dining-room of their new Chicago passenger terminal October 8. The dining-room was neatly decorated, and in deference to the nativity of the visitors, sprays of maple leaves (the emblem of Canada) adorned each table, and appropriate souvenir menu cards prepared especially for the occasion were distributed. A personally-escorted tour of the passenger terminal, after the luncheon, was made, which the party enjoyed very much. ywt

In the Spotlight

A wire received at this office this morning from a Massachusetts agency stated that Julia Arthur had decided to return to the stage for the last performance of her career. The retirement of the famous Canadian actress was a distinct loss to the American stage. She was at the height of a triumph, and would have undoubtedly been the queen of American drama, and might have essayed the greatest roles, had not Cupid beckoned and she become Mrs. Benjamin Pearce Cheney in 1888. Several years ago she was injured in a runaway at Boston and she has been in poor health ever since.

Julia Arthur's theatrical history dates from the time she was 11 years of age, when she took her first role, that of Portia. Three years later she made her debut with D. E. Handman, and after three years with him went to England and Germany to study violin and dramatic art. She made her first success at the Union Square Theatre in New York in "The Black Masque." Her ability was recognized by A. M. Palmer, who started her in "Lady Windermere's Fan," but her real entry was in "Mercedes," which was produced for her in 1893. After playing Sister Mary with great pathos and power, Sir Augustus Harris made her an offer to go to England, but this, with other offers, she declined. Sir Henry Irving was more fortunate, and she was with him for her 1895 London season and immediate American tour. She played in roles next Miss Terry, and even took some of that star's former parts, notably "Romeo and Juliet." It was said of her that "she had no rival on the American stage so endowed with the Juliet nature."

Her other productions were numerous. The only performance the writer saw in this city was "A Lady of Quality," but she was here in several other pieces. One of the New York papers called her "the Sara Bernhardt of the American stage," and she certainly proved to be an Americanized edition of the greatest actress. It is to be hoped that in her farewell appearance she will not neglect her native land, which believes her the greatest member of the theatrical profession this country has ever produced.

The lure of the stage seems to be irresistible to those who are chosen. Miss Cora Tracy, of this city, who had a striking career in light opera, has recently announced her intention of returning to the stage. Her home has been in Montana since she was married, but even her husband agreed that life out there was just a little monotonous, and it is with his consent that she is again to take a place in the spotlight for a season. It was rumored here that she signed with Ziegfeld's "Follies," but that the character of the production did not appeal to her, and she is negotiating with other managers. Her rich contralto has always marked her as a prize in light opera, and we may expect to see her name in connection with some prominent production in a few days. Londoners remember her for her excellent portrayal of one of the chief parts in "Red Feather." Miss Tracy and her father spent several weeks in the city recently.

London newspapermen and a large number of their good friends are working assiduously in the preparation of a minstrel show to be given at the Grand Opera House on November 20 and 21. The proceeds are to be donated to the Victorian Order of Nurses, who are in need of funds at the present time, owing to the distress among the poor of the city. While the scribes do not promise to produce a show that will send Homey Boy Evans off the road, they have a good chorus and every man is attending practices, which counts for much. The first part, with a chorus of sixty voices, promises to be a feature.

The public will undoubtedly patronize the attraction as it is entirely a work of charity.
We beg to acknowledge the receipt of four single tickets to the May A. Belle Marks performance. They are signed by R. W. Marks, from whom we had a letter protesting against certain remarks that appeared in this column. Not because he sent the tickets, we hasten to assure Mr. Marks that no unhappiness moved us to "jolly" Brother Tom a bit, and that when we referred to the late Alex. Marks it was in a memory of his good qualities and his geniality. There is no desire to give anyone a cruel thrust, and certainly not a good Canadian theatrical family like the Marks, who, to say the least, give value for every cent they receive, which is saying a good deal more than can be said of more pretentious productions. We shall be unable to use the letter on the complimentary thing being "off" on this paper, but we shall endeavor to see his performance during the week and give our candid opinion of it.

In reply to "Inquirer," we hasten to assure him that as soon as we hear when the local theatrical season is open we shall print it. ywt

Miss Margaret Anglin, who is starring in Oscar Wilde's corrupting comedy-drama, "Lady Windermere's Fan," has acquired the rights to a new play entitled "The Divine Friend," by Charles Phillips, a San Francisco newspaper writer. She tells her public that she has faith in it, not only because the principal character gives her the right kind of opportunity, but because she abounds in scenes of absorbing interest. Miss Anglin has also new comedy, by Ernest Denney, an English writer. She approves it entirely, and her intention to make early use of one or both of these new properties. Following her New York engagement she will make a western tour. After her regular appearances in San Francisco she will present the "Medea" of Euripides on an elaborate scale at the Greek theatre of the University of California, where her performances in the "Antigone" and the "Electra" of Sophocles helped to make history.

Following that venture Miss Anglin will sail for Australia under a three-months' engagement in Sydney and Melbourne. From the antipodes she will return to New York in November, 1915, to produce a play by a famous writer, who is under contract to deliver his manuscript next May.

MUSIC CLUB TO AID RED CROSS FUND

Will Donate Proceeds of an Organ Recital to This Object.

Notwithstanding the general disorganization existing as a result of the war, the executive of the Women's Music Club has planned an exceptional season. At several of the recitals, brief and pithy papers will be presented on such subjects as "Canadian Musicians Who Have Achieved Fame," "Famous Singing Teachers," "Modern Russian Music," "Women Composers." With a view to making the recital as beneficial in an educational way as possible, a few minutes will be devoted each day to current events in the musical world.
