Seeing Week-End Market With Aunt Maria's Eyes

"We're here still," said Aunt Maria, looking at the Easter market. "Here still, Billy." "That was what Easter Saturday meant to two men, over whose heads many years had passed, as they clasped hands and looked into one another's eyes at the week-end market on Saturday.

"And how have you been?" said the first speaker. "Not very well through the winter, Billy. But I'm thankful to say I'm feeling pretty fine again now. The winters seem to get harder. Old folks are better when the spring comes again."

Billy's friend rejoiced that he was able once more to join in the festive of an Easter market, particularly on the day that an opportunity was afforded of looking upon "Byng of Vimy."

"Isn't it a beautiful market?" said one after another, joy of Easter Sunday in their faces. It was a market of fulfillment and a market of promise. There were the fruits of a past year, still well preserved, baskets of roses, apples, though, to be sure, some were getting a bit wrinkled in the cheeks; bags upon bags of potatoes at $1.40 and $1.50 apiece; turnips, carrots, beets, parsnips. There were the flowers that had come to perfection of bloom for just such a day and, associated with these, baskets and pots and little parcels tied up in newspaper of Shasta daisies, pansies, pinks, asters, a score and more varieties of plants that whispered of glorious summer gardens to be.

In a big basket down in the basement, a farmer's wife offered gladioli tubs at 60 cents a dozen. And the woman who bought the brown, wrinkled wizened things tucked them lovingly under her arm as she dreamed of the resurrection day when their grace and beauty to her home surroundings.

Woods Send Flowers.

In the most unexpected places, posies of woody blossoms smiled, dainty hepaticas and waxy blood-red, that might be purchased for three, five and ten cents each.

Aunt Maria arrived in time for the parade advertising the Y. M. C. A. In a big basket down in the basement, a farmer's wife offered gladioli tubs at 60 cents a dozen. And the woman who bought the brown, wrinkled wizened things tucked them lovingly under her arm as she dreamed of the resurrection day when their grace and beauty to her home surroundings.

But the gay and giddy procession for such a sedate place as the old Covent Garden market had a rival attraction in a big square tent, pegged down tight in the southwest corner, and telling to the world with realistic pictures and enormous type that within might be seen the largest steer in the world, "raised right out here in Huron County, and that freak of nature, the hairless horse."

A Doctor's Vision Realized

Toronto Product in World Wide Demand

The very month that the great war broke out, Dr. Robert G. Jackson placed ROMAN MEAL, made in Toronto, on the Canadian market. Because it was a balanced food made from whole wheat and rye cut into little granules and blended with bran and flaxseed, the doctor dreamed of seeing it sold all over the English-speaking world and wheat control swept ROMAN MEAL for a time almost from the market. Yet the demand has survived and to-day it is shipped to Britain, South Africa, Australia, and Hong Kong. Glasgow, Scotland, has recently had several carloads. A $5,000,000 corporation has been organized to market this Canadian product in the United States. Its Canadian sales are coming back by leaps and bounds, and Dr. Jackson's dream is fast being realized.

LONDON MEETS VICE ROYALTY IN SOCIAL WAY

Their Excellencies Attend First Function At War Memorial Children's Hospital.

GIRL GUIDES TAKE PART

Lady Byng Showered With Flowers—Official, But Delightfully Informal Event.

A happy augury for the future of the War Memorial Children's Hospital was the very first social function to be held there, the tea party given on Saturday afternoon by the board of the Victorian Order of Nurses, co-operating with the hospital committee, in honor of their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Byng.

Contractors and everybody else concerned had hurried the work forward in order that the first floor might be ship-shape to receive vice-royalty and stand up under inspection. "King's weather" prevailed, and as a result the sunshine streamed in through the windows, giving a finishing touch of brightness and good cheer.

Over the central doorway floated a splendid Union Jack, the gift of the past week to the hospital from Mrs. Guymer. Right from Ottawa avenue to the entrance stood at attention a double line of Girl Guides and Brownies and their officers in natty uniforms, all spick and span, the guard of honor for Lady Byng. Staff Captain Helen Davidson in command, the provincial commissioner, Mrs. F. P. Betts, a distinguished figure in her becoming uniform.

Gracious, stately and charming—all these adjectives applied to Lady Byng as she approached, her arms filled with flowers which had been presented to her earlier in the afternoon and wearing the tribute of the Women's Press Club, a corsage of mauve orchids, mauve sweet peas, lilies-of-the-valley and Sunset roses.

A pretty little incident was the presentation to Lady Byng by three Brownies, Doris Jones, Doreen Anderson and Phyllis Paige. They presented her with a small bouquet of flowers, a gift of the Women's Press Club, a corsage of mauve orchids, mauve sweet peas, lilies-of-the-valley and Sunset roses.

Over a tailored gown of taupe color she wore a handsome wrap of a dark blue that she suggested both, richly banded with sable. Her brimmed hat was of dark blue straw, with coque and ostrich feather trimming falling over the crown. The wrap, thrown open as she enjoyed the luxury of sitting down for tea in the east sun room, revealed a lustrous pearl necklace and a great favorite with her ladyship, a maple leaf of platinum, set with diamonds. The pearls were repeated in the long earrings, which were immensely becoming.

Attended by Capt. the Honorable F. W. Erskine, A.D.C., in the uniform of the Scots Greys, and Capt. A. C. Balfour, Baronet, and Lady Byng were accompanied on their arrival at the hospital by Mayor Cameron Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, the latter wearing a smart wrap of navy and grey and small navy hat.

In the receiving line were Lieut.-Col. W. M. Gartshore, chairman of the War Memorial Children's Hospital building committee; Mrs. Gartshore, Mrs. Arthur H. Smith, co-president of the hospital committee; Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, hon. secretary; Miss A. A. Harris, president of the Victorian Order of Nurses, and Miss M. Macdonald, secretary.

Mrs. Gartshore was wearing a black canton crepe gown with seal coat and black lace hat. Mrs. A. H. Smith, a cream suit costume and black hat with white ostrich garniture, and Miss Harris a chic costume in dove gray, the coat opening over a blouse of georgette in the same tone, and the small hat of dove gray satin. A throw of cross fox furnished a striking note of contrast.

Mrs. Greenaway wore a smart tailored costume in brown tones and scarlet hat, and Miss Macdonald, navy suit and hat and ermine stole.

On behalf of the hospital committee, Mrs. Smith presented her excellency with a sheaf of pinky cream roses. The token of welcome and loyalty of the V. O. N., presented by Miss Harris, was an exquisite Victorian bouquet of pink roses, Pansy sweet peas and lilies-of-the-valley, from which hung streamers of blue satin ribbon, stamped at the end with the V. O. N. crest in deeper blue, thus expressing the V. O. N. colors in two shades of blue. Badges stamped in the same manner were worn by the V. O. N. officers and members of staff.

Mrs. Ronald Harris, president, and Mrs. A. E. Cooper represented the London branch of the Canadian Red Cross, their floral offering a strikingly appropriate one, a great cluster of fragrant white lilies tied with broad red satin ribbon. Mrs. Harris was gown in dark blue, with a black hat, turning sharply up in front, and faced with beads in raspberry tone. A charming finishing touch was a corsage of lilies-of-the-valley.

Availed With Flowers. Mrs. Cooper wore a dark blue suit, ermine furs and black hat, and a corsage of American Beauty roses circled with violets. Mrs. W. A. McRoberts, wearing a dark blue costume and lace straw hat, on behalf of the Rebekah lodges of the city, the May Queen and Victoria Rebekahs, presented tulips and roses.

Lady Byng accepted the flowers with appreciative smiles, her beautiful dark eyes smiling as she lips, until she was so loaded down with the fragrant gifts that her arms wouldn't hold any more. At that point Capt. Balfour came to the rescue and relieved her of some of her precious burden, promptly, however, enlisting the assistance of Mrs. Wilson, and turning over to her the bouquets.

Tea was served in both east and west wings. Col. Gartshore, Mrs. Smith and Miss Harris escorted the vice-regal party to the east wing, where Mesdames Hale, Panet, David Williams and Ronald Harris presided over the tea cups at a long table adorned with clusters of yellow daffodils and blue hyacinths. Assisting in serving were Misses Symonds, McKenna, Manley, Ora White, Margaret McCrimmon, Ruth Robinson, Eula White, Mrs. A. V. Becher and Girl Guide officers.

A similar table was arranged in the west wing, where the honors were done by Mesdames E. H. Young, E. H. Johnston, Gerald Pearson and Miss Susan Blackburn, with the assistance of Mrs. Pickering, Fletcher, Evans, Wainwright, McDonald, Fletcher, Ruby Alexander and Girl Guide officers. The members of the tea committee were Mrs. F. Forristal, Mrs. Cameron Wilson, Miss McDonald, Mrs. Glennie Wilson, Miss Stevenson, Mrs. Guymer, Miss Macbeth and Miss Leah White.

A strictly official affair, by virtue of the fact that invitations had only been extended to those with official right to be present through connection with military or civic boards, churches or organizations that in some way had assisted the hospital, thanks to the example set by their excellencies.

Among the many present, both Lord and Lady Byng recognized a number whom they had met on the past week days. Several had seas in the way days. Several had the honor of being introduced, and one request of Lady Byng's was for members of the Women's Press Club, of whom she asked, as a member of the Canadian Women's Press Club, interested questions with regard to the local organization.

Admission was expressed by both Baron Byng and Lady Byng for the fine new hospital building, and their appreciation voiced that London has honored her men who laid down their lives in the war by building an institution for the healing of children.

Among the organizations and institutions represented were: Military headquarters and the military units of the city, all the civic boards, the Local Council of Women and all affiliated societies, the Ontario Women's Institute, the Commercial Travelers' Association, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions Clubs, Royal Arch, Masons, Mocha Patrol, Shriners, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, the Order of the Eastern Star, the Mothers' Clubs, all the I. O. D. E. Chapters, the Women's Canadian Club, Zionist Association, Y. W. C. A., Nursing Sisters' Association, the Good Cheer and Nightingale Clubs, the Women's Faculty Club of the Western University, the University Women's Club, the various faculties of the university, all religious denominations, Dundas and the Methodist Church, which is endowing a cot, the Hadassah Chapter, the Midwestern County Council and township councils. The Women's Press Club was invited as a body. Mrs. G. E. Edwards, president of the Ontario Women's Institute, was present to represent the rural women of Western Ontario, who have given valuable assistance to the hospital. Both members for London attended, Frank White, M.P., accompanied by Mrs. White, and Dr. H. A. Stevenson, M. L. A. G. R. Taggart represented the U. S. consular service.

Smith, Komoka, and William Elmer Mahon, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mahon of Lobo. The bride was attended by her cousin, Rosa Wrenham, and Fred Mahon was his brother's best man. The bride wore a black canton crepe dress trimmed with pale pink georgette and beaded with cut steel beads. After the marriage ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. James Spence, where a royal luncheon was served. The bride's travel suit was of navy blue serge, daintily braided, and her hat was of sand-colored georgette. The young couple motored to London and took the L. and P. CHILDREN'S COUGHS QUICKLY RELIEVED

It is hard for to keep the children from taking cold; they will run out of doors not properly wrapped, or have too much clothing on and get overheated and cool off too suddenly, they get their feet wet, kick off the clothes at night; the mother cannot watch them all the time, so what is she going to do? Mothers should never neglect the children's coughs or colds, but on the first sign should procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

I have tried different remedies, but I seem to get the best results from Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I have no difficulty in giving it to them as they like it. I always have at least one bottle in the house."
