In almost every farming district you may see the two extremes of farming; on the one hand everything about the place betokening prosperity; the barns in good condition, the house well built and hand-somely proportioned with wall love. somely proportioned, with well kept lawn on my stomach, and it seemed impossible to get relief. Finally I took one bottle of B. B. B. and one box of Burdock Pills, and they cured me completely. Mrs. S. B. You say this is a foregree of tumble.

When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria, When she had Children, she gave them Castoria, You say this is a fancy picture, but alas! it is all too common. The farmer himself is not to blame. It is his father who took not to blame. It is his father who took him from school before he was able to read words of two syllables, and made him follow the plough from morning until night, till all ambition to be anything but a machine was ground out of him. This is radically wrong. The time is coming, as I said

The government have established agricultural colleges, where any youth can take a course in practical, as well as scientific, farming at a small outlay, and it is to be hoped that in the near future we will have fewer machine farmers and many more of the well educated, model farmers, who do the sure and put a box of Ayer's Pills in your satchel before traveling, either by land or sea. and by patient and skillful labor have made their farms what they are. A farmer is not necessarily a clod-hopper, such as he is usually represented by the humorist, but, on the contrary, a model farmer is usually as well informed in all matters of every day life as the average citizen.

Now, what is the reason that there are not more model farmers, and fewer who can barely keep their heads above water; whose farms are heavily mortgaged, and who, instead of growing richer, grow poorer? The answer is simply this: A farmer must be educated for his calling the same as for any other profession. The time is past when it was thought that if a boy was unfit for anything else he had better that the farmer with no scientific education for his calling is going to be sadly left in the race of life.
