

Hall. Eventually the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, many people standing through the entire evening. The ushers had a heavy task to keep the corridors leading to the Assembly Hall clear of people. The task, however, had to be performed till after the arrival of the Supreme Chief Ranger.

It was indeed a brilliant home-coming, and one not less worthy of the man than the man was worthy of it. It proved that the people were fully illuminated inside and out, and proceeded to the residence of the Doctor on Carlton St., whence he was escorted to the glorious monument of his achievement, where the proceedings of welcome took place. Along the entire route down Jarvis street, along Queen to Victoria, down Victoria to Richmond, and to the corner of Bay street, the procession attracted much attention from the crowds of people who were abroad. Arrived at the Temple, the scene was a memorable one, no more unmindful of great achievements in the interests of peace, love and charity than they are of duties well performed by soldier or statesman.

THE ESCORT.

Early in the evening, the uniformed detachment of Temple Encampment No. 60, Royal Foresters, 75 strong, headed by the capital bugle band of the Sons of England, and commanded by Colonel C. A. Stone, marched from the Temple, which was beauti-

for the road and every approach to the building, and the capacious stairways and extensive corridors of the building itself, were blocked by people who would not budge to give pathway until the voice of authority made itself heard, and then shouts of rejoicing arose, for the Chieftain had arrived, the man who had brought comfort to the widow, joy to the orphan and relief to the distressed—surely a nobler and more glorious, aye, a manlier and more Christ-like work, than that of the
