

Personal experience with homœopathic treatment years ago taught me a very valuable lesson. Since then I have believed, though practicing under a different standard, that anything not possessing value was soon found out, and was by common consent buried.

When a system that has stood attack for a century, or more, still stands and flourishes, there must be something solid as a foundation. I am of opinion the day is not far distant when "Similia" will be taught in our regular colleges. In fact I am led to believe that any school which does not teach the dual properties of drugs and their action in both characters, is not considered strictly up to date, even now.

We are constantly learning. Something new is constantly turning up. Some valuable property of an old or new drug is being shown up. Is it safe for us to say we know all even of our own school?

Fraternity is the word. Let us learn, use and teach the best in all, of each and every system. Then we will have the respect of all.

Long may you wave, and God-speed the day when all physicians will be brethren, and work hand in hand. When there will be broader views.

more accurate knowledge and less nickel plate on brass.

A leading Ottawa Doctor writes:

"During Lactation when the strength of the mother is deficient, or the secretion of milk scanty, I find WYER'S LIQUID MALT EXTRACT gives most gratifying results." It not only supplies strength to meet the unusual demands upon the system at that time, but it improves the quality of the milk.
