THE MODERN MILKMAID.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I'm going a-milking, sir," she said.
"May I go with you, my pretty maid?"
"Get a doctor's certificate first," she said.
"Can't bring bacteria on any terms?"
"Cows are so apt, sir, at picking up germs."
"Take a carbolic plunge and prolixide spray."
"Don't sterilized rubber clothes—then, sir, you may."
"If you can prove that your germs are all dead."
"Go with me milking, sir," she said.
"Might I assist you, my pretty maid?"
"Get a lactologist's license," she said.
"Then I will let you help clean up my stable."
"Polish the floors just as bright as you're able."
"Bed them well down with sterilized straw."
"Germs have such fondness for milk in the straw!"
"Then treat the cows to a lively shampoo."
"A bath of hot water, and carbolic, too."
"Polish their teeth with a sterilized brush."
"Spray out their throats, and do all with a rush."
"Ten billion more germs'll be born ere you're thru."
"Get sterilized milk pails and stools for two."
"Put a state seal on the sterilized door."
"Spray the white place with carbolic once more."
"Then we'll be sure that the germs are all dead."
"Yes, you may go with me, sir," she said.

Some Easy Deserts

At this time of year milk and eggs are least expensive so may be used more generously. The busy housewife, who has but little time to give to superlatives, will find these dishes little trouble and not costly.
Molded Parfait—For each half pint of milk allow a large tablespoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Scald the milk in a double boiler; add the sugar and stir until it has thickened nicely, then add salt and sugar, cover and cook half an hour. Take off and add flavoring. Pour into cups or molds which have been rinsed in cold water. When very cold turn out and serve with cream and sugar.
Light Tapioca Custard—Add a pint of milk in a double boiler. Add two tablespoonfuls of fine tapioca; stir very often until thickened and then cook until clear and thick. Separate yolks and whites of three eggs. Beat the yolks with a half cup of sugar and a pinch of salt. Whip the whites to a stiff froth, add the yolks to the tapioca, stir until thickened, then add the whites, turn and mix lightly for three minutes, then take off, flavor to suit and pour into a serving dish to serve cold. According to the season and taste, add vanilla or lemon juice.
Turkish—In a tablespoonful of cold water break up and dissolve one junket or instant tablet. Take a measured quart of milk, put two tablespoonfuls of it and two tablespoonfuls of sugar in a saucepan, stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved then add all of the milk and heat until blood warm, then take off quickly. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon flavoring, and the dissolved tablet and pour quickly into cups or a dessert dish. Let stand until thickened, which will take about ten minutes; then set carefully away to chill. Serve very cold with cream and sugar.
Somerset Pudding—Take a stale sponge cake and stand on a serving dish. Prepare a cupful or more of fruit, fruit juice or the syrup from canned fruit. Baste this, a little at a time, over the cake until it is thoroughly soaked, but unbroken. Make a soft custard with a pint of milk, three eggs, a pinch of salt, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a suitable flavoring. When cold, pour it around, not over, the cake. Decorate the top with candied cherries or fresh fruit.

The World's Serial Story.

The Russian hound ran forward a few steps, pointing like a bird-dog, and Mrs. Faring halted, meditating a retreat to the house. But after a moment of this she laughed and went on.
"There's no harm in that poor little, bent-over thing," she said. "If he should turn nasty, I don't think I'd bite him in two. What an odd creature!"
The gray-haired tramp caught sight of her just then, and caught sight of the dog too, and he stopped and half turned, as if he meant to run away, but Mrs. Faring said:
"Don't be afraid of the dog. He'll not harm you."
The man grinned feebly, and made a funny little, jerky, shuffling bow. He answered, and his voice was thin, piping—the sort of voice to accord with that quaint personality.
"I—ah, I'm afraid, ma'am," he said. "Leastways, not much afraid, tho speakin' in general I don't take to dogs—nor yet gawks to me. Thankee, ma'am!" Suddenly he dropped into the beggar's whining sing-song:
"Could you spare a few cents to get a meal with, ma'am? I haven't had nothin' to eat for—three days, awmost. I'm hungry, somethin' scandalous!"
Mrs. Faring gave a little cry of distressed pity. The man in spite of his wizened face and lean, bent body, did not look in the least starved, and she greatly doubted the truth of his statement; but the very suggestion that a human being was hungry, waked springs of ready tenderness in her.
"Oh, I'm sorry," she said. "I'm sorry! Come up to the house! I have no money here, but I will have them give you something to eat and then I will give you some money before you go."
The man made his awkward, jerky little bow again.
"Thankee, ma'am!" he said again. He shuffled uneasily.
"Could you call the dawg off, ma'am?" he said. "I don't like 'em to dawgs."
The Russian hound was sniffing at the stranger's knees with the most unbecoming curiosity. Suddenly it began to bark and yelp and to leap about the man, almost pushing him off his feet with its demonstrations of joy. Bonty called out to it sharply, but it would not come to her. It continued to leap about the gray little tramp, licking his hands and barking.
She took a step forward.
"It's most understandin', Sarge never likes strangers." The man looked up at her with his uneasy, half-frightened grin.
"Could you call him off, ma'am?" he

Buchanan's Wife

"Consumption!" she said, dumbly. "He's going to die, he's had not a trace of feeling over it. She seemed to be beyond feeling."
"John, ma'am," said the little gray man, when he could speak, "I don't know John the gang used to call me. I don't know why—cept it may be on account of the tales I tell them as I makes up out of my head."
"Tales?" she said, mechanically.
"Yes, ma'am," said the little gray man. "You see, ma'am," he said, "the gang has been good to me—even if they does kick me out at last, being suspicious-like. They picks me up somewhere—I don't remember where, with my head broke open—askin' your pardon, ma'am—and me very sick, and they nurses me very careful and kind, and feeds me and all, so I tries to please them by making up tales out of my head to tell when they're a-sittin' about of an evening. Very run tales they is. I don't know how I thinks of them, but the gang likes them. They says I tell the finest lies they ever saw, and they just lies on their backs and yells when I tells them about my big house and my horses and carriages and all."
The woman went white.
"Your—house—carriages?" she said, in a whisper.
The little gray man gave an apologetic laugh and shuffled his feet.
