

FOR DYSPEPSIA, Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It is an effective remedy, as numerous testimonials conclusively prove. "For two years I was a constant sufferer from dyspepsia and liver complaint. I doctored myself in every way, but without success. I then used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and in a few days I felt better. I continued to use it until I was cured. It is a most valuable medicine, and I can recommend it to all who suffer from dyspepsia or liver complaint."—J. F. McVitt, Hingham, 20 Sumner st., Lowell, Mass.

FOR DEBILITY, Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It is a certain cure, when the complaint originates in impoverished blood. "I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, feeling faintly, so debilitated that I was unable for work. Nothing but Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored me to health. I feel every opportunity to recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with debility."—J. F. McVitt, Hingham, 20 Sumner st., Lowell, Mass.

FOR ERUPTIONS

And all disorders originating in impurity of the blood, such as boils, carbuncles, pimple, blotches, skin eruptions, scald-head, scurvy, and all other skin diseases. It is a most valuable medicine, and I can recommend it to all who suffer from eruptions or skin diseases."—J. F. McVitt, Hingham, 20 Sumner st., Lowell, Mass.

ST. JOHN'S ENEMY HAS HUSTLED.

There was a time when the night mightiness of the St. John Globe was almost unapproachable; they could do as they liked and they laughed to scorn any attempt to control them. Now, however, since the opposition of the GAZETTE, began to be felt, all has changed. The Globe's business has become unstable and its proprietors no longer carry a proud and defiant head. It has taken to limping, but the position of momentary change of the rear, knowing that they could only carry out their orders and drive the load-bearers with greatest severity. Why had he appointed Bartlett, whom he disliked as much as Bartlett disliked him, and whom he knew was capable for the work to be done? The position of momentary change of the rear, knowing that they could only carry out their orders and drive the load-bearers with greatest severity. Why had he appointed Bartlett, whom he disliked as much as Bartlett disliked him, and whom he knew was capable for the work to be done?

THE STANLEY CONTROVERSY.

Instead of smouldering away the Stanley controversy waxed hotter and hotter as time goes on. Herbert Ward, who was with the expedition, published a letter in the Times last Thursday in which he charges as chief with collecting and setting about the little-tattle of tale bearers in order to evade the main controversy. Mr. Ward asks why Stanley left his position of momentary change of the rear, knowing that they could only carry out their orders and drive the load-bearers with greatest severity. Why had he appointed Bartlett, whom he disliked as much as Bartlett disliked him, and whom he knew was capable for the work to be done?

SEEDLING APPLES.

Farmers throughout the Maritime Provinces and all over New England have this season had an unprecedented demand for seedling apples for exportation and the manufacture of jellies and marmalades. This demand is likely to increase ten fold within a few years for the industry is in its infancy and its products are among the prime necessities of life. For exportation, jellies and marmalades, the seedlings are quite as good as the best table varieties and many think them better because they retain in a more decided degree the flavor of the fresh fruit. There being a demand for seedling apples, it is a remunerative price, say 25 cents per bushel, it would not be amiss for farmers to consider the advisability of starting orchards, which can be done without the outlay of a cent. Everyone probably knows that apple trees grown from the seeds invariably produce a different variety of fruit from that from which the seeds were taken; the best varieties have been selected seedlings, propagated by grafting. The farmer has only to sow his apple seeds, or pommes from older mills in rows as he would sow peas, either in the fall or spring. Keep down the weeds, thin out as they begin to crowd each other, transplant when about two feet high, probably the second season, into rows four or five feet apart, and finally into the orchard. The seedling apple tree has the disadvantage that it does not come into bearing by several years as early as the grafted apple tree in the orchard, and it is not likely that one tree in a million produces as valuable fruit as the Ribston Pippin or the Rhode Island Greening. But it has its advantages. The farmer can grow his own trees absolutely without cost. The seedling apple is one of the most ornamental of trees. Under favorable circumstances they grow like oaks in an open, spreading their arms on every side to a great distance. Their foliage rarely fades or falls until it is beaten off by the winds of November or December. We have seen the green leaves of the previous year on seedling apple trees in April. The tree is a long live; how long, it will be difficult to say, but we know there are those in this province and Nova Scotia that are more than one hundred years old and are still vigorous and productive. The grafted tree is one some old when it is planted. The graft itself, which really forms the tree, the roots being only its feeders, may have come from a tree that was half decayed, and of course, bears within it its parent's infirmities. So far as production goes, under the same circumstances the seedling is the better bearer; under favorable circumstances there is little difference between the one and the other. Thirty or forty years ago most of the orchards in New England and in the province with the exception of Annapolis valley, were planted with seedlings. In every fruit raising parish there was a mill where the fruit could be sold at five cents a bushel or made into cider "by the halves." As ten bushels were required for a barrel and the customary price for a barrel of cider was a dollar, in either case the farmer got but five cents for his apples. In some cases the farmers stored the apples in their cellars and during the winter cooked them with potatoes for their pigs; they used in this manner were considered no less valuable than the potatoes themselves. In many of the states in the south the apples are planted in lawns and parks purely as an ornamental tree. Its blossoms are generally larger and more beautiful than those of the apple tree. It is certainly very beautiful when loaded with fruit, and, as said before, the color of its leaves rarely fades, and they are retained longer than by any other of our deciduous trees. We have advised, however, the planting of these trees as a source of profit for they will grow vigorously and yield an abundance of fruit, while the better varieties are a failure, and for their fruit price and demand is sure to increase constantly for many years.

FASHIONABLE FLOWERS.

Decorations Displayed at Fashionable Weddings and other Gatherings.

The Fall season has opened with a great demand upon the florist for novelties in decorations.

We have in new roses the Mrs. William Russell, which is much like the Rose of Sharon. This is a white hybrid, most charmingly sweet and of great merit. This rose will be very scarce here until another year, for it is only grown by a few planters.

Mrs. Hugh Dixon is another new rose of great beauty. It is a handsome bush in color, and is more like the Souvenir de Malmaison. It has received a medal for its beauty in London, and will be worn here extensively by young ladies who are blossoming, as it is remarkably becoming to them.

Madame Hoste is an excellent rose which has a faint yellow tinge. This has the quality of being a good rose to wear, and it is a great favorite on that account.

The Duchess of Albany is also a fine rose for wearing purposes, and it is quite like La France.

A large German glass basket was filled with Madame Hoste roses and sent as an engagement gift to a Jewish lady last Sabbath. In the centre of the basket was placed a box containing an engagement ring over which was a bunch of American Beauty roses.

For a home wedding a White Avenue florist made an arch of Niphetos roses from which was hung a bell with a monogram of wedding couple on one side. Instead of fruit, in now the most fashionable arrangement.

Mrs. Addison Cunnack lately gave a dinner which was decorated with American Beauty roses. These roses were placed in a large silver bowl in the centre of the table, and the dinner was most charmingly decorated with them.
