THE DIAMOND OF GANGODWARRA

By GERARD, P. E.

The Major dropped a second piece of ice into his whiskey "peg," and puffed absently at his cheroot until the value of the diamond would be carried by the high priests through an avenue of thousands of kneeling, quivering fanatics. My pulse beat and I trembled in every limb with a suppressed excitement, as I saw the priest advancing, bearing on a platted red, tray an enormous diamond, the facets of which shot out rays of a thousand brilliant hues. Nearer and nearer, drew the priest and had it not been for my two companions I feel sure I would have sprang out and seized the coveted treasure. At last—I held my breath—the wonderful jewel, larger by far than a hen's egg, was opposite me. I raised my head, gazed spellbound and for the first time in my life I felt that I might have my nerves possibly the excitement I had passed through—but I put it down to the disappointment. It was not a diamond after all, but only the top broken off the stopper of a cut glass decanter.

The regatta today, at Marblehead, took place in a light southeast wind and brought out some good sport, especially in the P class, in which six boats contested. HIS FORTUNE MADE BY LUCK DONKEY

London Costermongers Exhibit Animals by Which They Make a Living.

LONDON, July 10.—The costermonger's love for his donkey was demonstrated yesterday afternoon at the People's Palace, Mile End road. Nearly 200 donkeys, carefully groomed, with their owners standing by them in their Sunday best, were exhibited under the auspices of Our Dumb Friends League. Many of the costermongers declared that they would not part with their little animals for untold gold. "Here's the foundation of all my little fortune," said William Wills, an East End coal dealer, as he stroked his sturdy prize winner, Lazy Lightning. "Five years ago I was dead broke; I borrowed 50s to buy my little pal here"—patting the donkey again. "First my donkey carried coal from street to street on a barrow; but gradually my trade grew. Now I've got three little shobs, and a farm out in the country. But it was the donkey that turned my luck and put me on the right road. Out at the farm there's a nice green field, with shady trees in it. As soon as this show's over that's where my donkey's going to and his days just doing nothing but enjoy the green grass—and rest."

KING VICTOR AS BOLD MOUNTAINEER

Italy's Ruler Has Adventure Fraught With Peril in the Southern Alps. ROME, July 9.—King Victor Emmanuel went on Thursday to Assegni to make the ascent of the Gran Sasso d'Italia. His Majesty was accompanied by a detachment of the royal alpine troops. The first part of the ascent—as far as Portella, 6400 feet—was accomplished without difficulty. Beyond this point the road was obstructed with snow, which covers the summit of the mountain. The ascent was now not only difficult but dangerous, but the king insisted on proceeding. His Majesty's steps were first cut in the snow by the guides, but new difficulties arose, snow fell, and the guides warned the king that it would be impossible to reach the summit of the mountain, if he was to return, until long after midnight. As it was impossible to telegraph that he would be late back, his Majesty, much against his will, gave up the idea of proceeding. The return was made without difficulty, the king reaching Assegni as dusk was falling. His Majesty passed the night there at a simple inn, and returned to Rome yesterday morning by motorcar. The Duke of Abruzzi, cousin of the King of Italy, has reached the foot of the Himalayas peak known as K2 (Godwin-Austen), which is 28,265 feet high.
