STREET PAVING.

At yesterday's meeting of the Com-mon Council, the general opinion was that start be made on permanent pavements. The aldermen very wisely decided to first have reports on the different pipe lines under those streets on which pavements are to laid. In reply to a question regarding the condition of water pipes in a certain section, the engineer stated that the main had been put down in 1873 and was doing as well as could be expected. This reply will be found equally applicable to many other water mains all over the city. The question now is whether "as-well-as-could-be-expected" is well enough? Should permanent pavement be laid over a forty year old iron pipe even though that pipe seems to be in reasonable repair? Admitting that a very considerable outlay is involved, it would be wise to take no risks, but to make certain in so far as experts can be certain, that it will not be necessary to rip up the streets within the next few years in order to replace worn-out mains. The system of water distribution is said to be in rather poor shape, and sections of the pipe lines must of necessity be wed from year to year. No doubt, when a definite plan is being arranged, it will be found possible to have these two branches of the public work carried on together, thus keeping the cost as low as can in reason be expected. THE MARKET ENTRANCE.

In the police court yesterday Magishad been brought by Policeman Perry against Constable Weatherhead and ceman Burchill for loitering about the Charlotte street Market entrance. The evidence went to prove the innocence of the defendants on this charge, otherwise the case would not, of course, have been dismissed. The Charlotte street entrance to the Market is, however, a favorable loafing place for a considerable number of petty officials and private individuals, and if Policeman Perry, or any of the other officers, will go to the trouble of securing incontestable evidence, which can be readily done-against some of the many frequenters of this spot, they will be rendering a benefit to the city. People who have business in the Market have to dodge around this bunch of loafers at almost every PRIZES OFFERED FOR hour of the day or night, and the people who block the way are very often men who should know better. Magistrate Ritchie remarked during the hearing of the case, that officials have no more right to loiter about the Range From $3,000 to $250 Bul Aerostreets than have any other persons. Apparently there are numbers of officials who fail to realize this. Perhaps if they were chased off the streets, pri-Vate citizens would more readily observe the law.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 12—It was announced today that Courtlandt Field Bishop, President of the Aero Club of America, had sanctioned as official representative of that organization the following list of prizes for the aviation meet, beginning with events this afternoon:

The Evening Chit-Chat

I wonder it many people realize what an immense amount of fun one can get out of life by finding out what other people's lives are like.

It seems to me that like associates with like too much.

We are apt to weaken ourselves by being too constantly with our own kind, and rever making the effort to hold converse with the other kinds.

The bootblack, the shop girl, the st enographer, the business man, the waitress, the college student all have different angles on life, and if all of them would try to get to each other's angles occasionally they would alli be much broader minded and have much more to think

I don't mean by that that anyone can include in his circle of friends every kind and condition of men. What I am trying to say is simply that you can get a great deal of fun out of life, and incidentally broaden your understanding very much by trying to find out what the lives of the hundreds of people whom you serve and who serves you each day are like.

Did you ever say anything much beyond "Good morning" or "Adark polish, pleas," or "Looks like rain" to your bootblack while he was polishing your shoes?

shoes?

Probably not, if you are an average man.

Well, some time try asking him how he happened to go into business, and how long he has to work, and how well it pays, and what he wants to be when he gets through bein ga bootblack, and see if he doesn't give you something interesting to thin k about.

Did you ever talk to a telephone gir I about life at the switchboard I did the other day and I found ou t a lot of things that I don't believe many people know, and that I think are worth knowing.

For instance, when you ask your o perator a perfectly simple question that you are sure she could answer if she wanted to, and instead of answering it she insists on saying. "I'll give you information," wouldn't it cool your wrath some to know that she does that, not because she wants to be disobliging, but because she is not allowed to say anything except a few formulas.

On all the big exchanges, this girl told me, the operators are absolutely forbidden to say anything except a few prescribed formulas, such as "What number are you calling?" "Till give you information. "The line is busy." "Shall I call you" and two or three others.

The slightest infraction of this rule—even answering "Good morning" to a pleasant greeting, for instance—is p unished by fine or suspension.

Isn't that rather interesting
While you waited for your change, did you ever talk to the shop girl about people as they look behind a co unter?

Did you ever ask some rich man how life looks from his angle Did you ever get one of the waitres sesses at your favorite restaurant to tell you some of the funny and interesting experiences that come her way. No, they won't think you a Paul P ry at all if you go about it rightly.

Don't you like to tell about your own peculiar experiences, your own view of life, your angle on the world?

Well, so will they if you ask them in the right way.

A COLUMN FOR WOMEN

Household: Hints

Some exceedingly attractivve picture frames are made of linen with a simple design embroidered in satin stitch. The ribbon, too, is exceedingly attractive used in this way.

Turquoises or coral beads, quantities of them massed together, are considered very smart on black and white not, the coral on the black and the gray net being very effective.

Skirts continue to be hugged in around the knees, either just below or just above. They are often very full, but they lie in a mass about the feet whether they are full or scanty.

Simple chain-stitching is revived as a finish for drapery. Many of the smart new gowns which have tunics or sashes or shoulder drapery of chiffon have the edges heavily chain-stitched.

The skirts of nearly all stylish suits and separate skirts as well show plaits around or introduced in various ways between gores or as insertions in curvalor sides.

Dresses of rich material show many girdle effects in contrasting fabrics, generally satin. All are folded, but some are double-pointed, some point upward, some downward at the front.
Fur bands are made to simulate Spanish bolero effects, furnish outlines on dresses, are used for headings and edges to flounces—in fact, fur is enplied to gowns, coats and wraps wherever fancy, governed by good taste, suggests.

Fashions and Fads

Crystal and gold bugles are used for utlining designs in lace on many many a dressy hat.

A favorite pattern in the silk muffers is the polka dot. The dots are large and plentiful. large and plentiful.

Turbans of fur, with dull gold trimmings and flowers of tarnished metal, are worn for evening.

Bands of chinchila are used as trimmings to some of the handsome evening scarfs of messaline.

Tiny pink satin roses, with rose leaves, too, are to be had in the shops for trimming evening gowns.

When quite a young man Dr. Hannay wrote poems under the non deplume of "Saladin" for the St. Join Courier and other papers. Later he cave a number of ballads relating to Acadia, describing picturesque incidents in its history. These were widely circulated and gained for Dr. Hannay a position among the ranks of the leading Canadian ucets. The Acadian ballads were recently reprinted in pamphlet form. The turban fad shows indications of being overdone, and it is being eschewed by some of the careful dressers.

Petticoats and princess slips are being made of the thinnest materials and without a plait or gather.

A bandeau of silver or gold, set with baroque pearls, is among the most striking ornaments for the coliflure.

Stole and muff sets for dressy wear are edged with six or eight inch silk fringe, matching the fur in color.

Chantilly, imitation thread, English thread and other light laces of this character are creeping into favor, Raffia is being used for embroidering designs on curtains or monk's cloth. This effective work is quickly done.

Allowed.

Nearly every tailor effect skirt has a yoke of some kind this season, and among the most novel is the one here presented, theyoke portion of which is fitted by hip seams, and to it box plaited flounce and front and back panel gores are attached, these being stitched flat for a short distance from their upper edge. The closing of the garment is invisibly effected at the left side-back seam. The design is adaptable to serge, voile, cloth, tweed or fancy camel's-hair mixtures; also, later in the year will prove effective for linen, rajah, pongee, crash, duck or gingham. The pattern is cut in five sizes—22 to 30 inches waist measure. For 26 waist the skirt requires 57-8 yards of material 36 inches wide. Width of lower edge is about 41-4 yards.

Price of pattern, 10 cents.
